Re. 17. 16, 17. the least. ch. 37. 10; 49. 20. surely he. We have already adverted to the completion of the prophecies respecting the final destruction of Babylon, (on Is 13. 18,) and shall only add a few more observations, in order to shew more clearly the full accomplishment of some of these predictions. STRABO says that in his time (about the Christian era) a great part of it was a desert. JEROME says that in his time (cir. A.D. 340) it was quite in ruins, the walls merely serving for an inclosure for wild beasts, for the hunting of the kings of Parthia: and modern travellers universally concur in describing it in a state of utter desolation, and the habitation of wild beasts and noxious reptiles.

Cyrus had conquered Armenia, defeated Crœsus king of Lydia, (B.C. 548,) and subdued several nations from the Egean sea to the Euphrates, before he marched against Babylon; and XENOPHON also informs us that there were not only Armenians, but both Phrygians and Cappadocians in the army of Cyrus. After Cyrus had been the instrument in the hands of God of taking Babylon, he marched against Tomyris, queen of the Massagetæ, a Scythian nation, and was totally defeated, (B.C. 530.) The victorious queen, who had lost her son in a previous battle, was so incensed against Cyrus, that she cut off his head, and threw it into a vessel filled with human blood, exclaiming, Satia te sanguine, quem sitisti.

30 The mighty. Accordingly the Babylonians, after the loss of a battle or two, never recovered their courage to face the enemy in the field, they retired within their walls; and the first time that Cyrus came with his army before the place he could not provoke them to venture forth, though he challenged the king to fight a duel with him; and the last time he came he consulted with his officers respecting the best mode of carrying on the siege, 'since,' said he, 'they do not come out to fight.' ver. 32, 57; ch. 48. 41; 50. 36, 37. In memory of this calamity, the Jews keep two fasts to this day; the seventeenth of the fourth month, which falls in June, for the destruction of Jerusalem, and the ninth of the fifth month, which falls in July, for the destruction of the temple; both of which are mentioned by Zechariah as kept from this event till his time, a period of seventy years, under the names of the fast of the fourth month, and the fast of the fifth month. the nineteenth. ver. 29. 2 Ki. 24. 12; 25. 8. captain of the guard. or, chief marshal. Heb. chief of the executioners, or slaughtermen, and so ver. 14; ch. 39. 9. The LAMENTATIONS of JEREMIAH.

B.C. 588. A.M. 3416.

CHAP. I.

The miseries of Jerusalem and of the Jews pathetically lamented, with confessions of their sins, 1-11. The attention and compassion of beholders demanded to this unprecedented case, 12-17. The justice of God acknowledged, and his mercy supplicated, with prayers against insulting foes, 18-22.

1 How doth. The LXX. have the following words as an introduction: 'And it came to pass after Israel had been carried captive, and Jerusalem was become desolate, that Jeremiah sat weeping, and lamented with this lamentation over Jerusalem, and said.' ch. 2. 1; 4. 1. 12 Is it nothing. or, It is nothing. pass by. Heb. pass by the way. if. The church in distress here magnifies her affliction; and yet no more than there was cause for her groaning was not heavier than her strokes. She appeals to all spectators—see if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow. This might truly be said of the griefs which were suffered in Jerusalem of old; but Christians are apt to apply these words too sensibly and sensitively to themselves, when they are in trouble, and sometimes more than there is reasonable cause to warrant. All men feel most from their own burden, and cannot be persuaded to reconcile themselves to it; how often do they cry out in the words we are illustrating! whereas, if their troubles were to be thrown into a common stock with those of others, and then an equal dividend made, share and share alike, rather than approve such an arrangement, each would be ready to say, 'Pray give me my own again.'—HENRY. ch. 2. 13; 4. 6-11. 15 The combination of scorn, enmity, rage, and exultation, which the conquerors and spectators manifested at the destruction of Jerusalem and the temple, are here described with peculiar pathos and energy. The whole scene is presented to view as in an exquisitely finished historical painting. that pass. De. 29. 22-28. 1 Ki. 9. 7-9. 2 Ch. 7. 21. Je. 18. 16. by. Heb. by the way. clap. ch. 1. 8. 22 the likeness. ver. 26; ch. 10. 1. Ex. 24. 10. Job 37. 22. Re. 4. 3, 6; 21. 11. crystal. The Hebrew kerach, which generally denotes ice, doubtless here signifies crystal, (κρυσταλλος, from κρυος, cold, ice, and στελλομαι, to concrete,) as it is rendered by the LXX. and Vulgate. It is a very large class of silicious minerals, hard, pellucid, naturally colourless, of regularly angular figures, and of simple plates; not flexible, nor elastic, but giving fire with steel; not fermenting by acid menstrua, but calcinable in a strong fire. There are three orders of pure crystal: the first is perfect columnar crystals, with double pyramids, of eighteen planes, in an hexangular pyramid at each end; the second is that of perfect crystals without a column, of twelve or sixteen planes, in two hexangular pyramids: and the third is that of imperfect crystals, with single pyramids, of ten or twelve planes, in an hexangular or pentangular column. Terrible crystal seems to denote that which was well cut and polished, vividly refracting the rays of light.

23 their wings. ver. 12, 24. which. ver. 11. Job 4. 18. Ps. 89. 7. Lu. 17. 10.

25 and had. ver. 24.

26 And above. Abp. NEWCOME judiciously observes, 'We need not allegorize the circumstances of this august vision too minutely. CHAP. IV.

Under the type of a siege is shewn the time from the defection of Jeroboam to the captivity, 1-8. By the provision of the siege, is shewn the hardness of the famine, 9-17.

1 take. ch. 5. 1, etc.; 12. 3, etc. 1 Sa. 15. 27, 28. 1 Ki. 11. 30, 31. Is. 20. 2-4. Perhaps, however, it may here denote a flat tile, like a Roman brick, which were commonly used for tablets, as we learn from PLINY, Hist. Nat. l. vii. c. 57. even. Je. 6. 6; 32. 31. Am. 3. 2.

5 I have. Is. 53. 6. three. This number of years will take us back from the year in which Judea was finally desolated by Nebuzar-adan, B.C. 584, to the establishment of idolatry in Israel by Jeroboam, B.C. 975. 'Beginning from 1 Ki. 12. 33. Ending Je. 52. 30.'

6 forty days. This represented the forty years during which gross idolatry prevailed in Judah, from the reformation of Josiah, B.C. 624, to the same final desolation of the land. Some think that the period of 390 days also predicts the duration of the siege by the Babylonians, (ver. 9,) deducting from it five months and twenty-nine days, when the besiegers went to meet the Egyptians (2 Ki. 25. 1-4; Je. 37. 5;) and that forty days may have been employed in desolating the temple and city. 'Beginning from 2 Ki. 23. 3, 23. Ending Je. 52. 30.' each day for a year. Heb. a day for a year, a day for a year. Nu. 14. 34. Da. 9. 24-26; 12. 11, 12. Re. 9. 15; 11. 2, 3; 12. 14; 13. 5.

9 wheat. ver. 13, 16. millet. Dochan, in Arabic, dokhn, the holcus dochna of FORSKAL, is a kind of millet, of considerable use as food; the cultivation of which is described by BROWNE. fitches. or, spelt. Kussemim is doubtless ζεα, or spelt, as AQUILA and SYMMACHUS render here; and so LXX. and THEODOTION, ολυρα. In times of scarcity it is customary to mix several kinds of coarser grain with the finer, to make it last the longer. three. ver. 5.

15 cow's dung. Dried cow-dung is a common fuel in the East, as it is in many parts of England, to the present day; but the prophet was ordered to prepare his bread with human ordure, to shew the extreme degree of wretchedness to which the besieged should be exposed, as they would be obliged literally to use it, from not being able to leave the city to collect other fuel.

16 I will. ch. 5. 16; 14. 13. Le. 26. 26. Ps. 105. 16. Is. 3. 1. eat. The prophet was allowed each day only twenty shekels weight, or about ten ounces, of the coarse food he had prepared, and the sixth part of a hin, scarcely a pint and a half, of water; all of which was intended to shew that they should be obliged to eat the meanest and coarsest food, and that by weight, and their water by measure. ver. 10, 11; ch. 12. 18, 19. Ps. 60. 3. La. 1. 11; 4. 9, 10; 5. 9.

17 and consume. ch. 24. 23. Le. 26. 39.

CHAP. V.

Under the type of hair, 1-4, is shewn the judgment of Jerusalem for their rebellion, 5-11; by famine, sword, and dispersion, 12-17.

1 son. In this expressive emblem, the prophet represents the Jewish nation; his hair, the people; the razor, the Chaldeans; the cutting of the hair, the calamities and disgrace coming upon them; the balances, the exact distribution of the Divine judgments; the third part of the hair burnt, those destroyed in the city; the third part smitten with a knife, those slain in attempting to escape; the third part scattered to the winds, those who escaped to other countries; the few hairs in his skirt, those left with Gedaliah; and the burning of these, their destruction in Egypt. take. ch. 44. 20. CHAP. VI.

The judgment of Israel for their idolatry, 1-7. A remnant shall be blessed, 8-10. The faithful are exhorted to lament their abominations and calamities, 11-14.

1 This is a new prophecy, and was probably given after the 430 days of his lying on his left and right side were accomplished. By Israel here Judea is simply meant; not the ten tribes, who had long before been carried captive.

CHAP. VII.

The final desolation of Israel, 1-15. The mournful repentance of them that escape, 16-19. The enemies defile the sanctuary because of the Israelites' abominations, 20-22. Under the type of a chain is shewn the miserable captivity of all orders of men, 23-27.

2 I beheld. ch. 1. 4, 26, 27. Da. 7. 9, 10. Re. 1. 14, 15. amber. Amber is a hard, inflammable, bituminous substance, of a beautiful yellow colour, very transparent, and susceptible of an exquisite polish. When rubbed it is highly endowed with electricity; a name which the moderns have formed from its Greek name ηλεκτρον. But, as amber becomes dim as soon as it feels the fire, and is speedily consumed, it is probable that the original chashmal, which BOCHART derives from the Chaldee nechash, copper, and melala, gold, was a mixed metal, similar to that which the Greeks called ηλεκτρον, electrum, as the LXX. and Vulgate render, from its resemblance to amber in colour.

9 behold. ch. 1. 15-17. as the. Da. 10. 6. Re. 21. 20. a beryl. Tarshish is generally rendered by the LXX. and the Vulgate, the chrysolite, so called by the ancients (from χρυσος, gold, and λιθος, a stone,) because of its fine gold yellow colour. It is now called by the moderns the topaz; is a very beautiful and valuable gem in its pure and perfect state, though very rarely found so; and the finer pieces of it are in hardness second only to the diamond. The Vulgate, however, in ch. 1. 16, renders, quasi visio maris, 'as the appearance of the seas,' i. e. azure; and Dr. GEDDES (on Ex. 28. 10) says, that, with ABARBANEL, he believes the beryl to be intended. It is a pellucid gem, called by our lapidaries, aqua marina, of a sea or bluish green colour, found in the East Indies and about the gold mines of Peru. The genuine beryl never receives any other mixture of colour; and in its perfect state approaches to the hardness of the garnet.

14 every. ver. 21; ch. 1. 6-10. 1 Ki. 7. 29, 36. Re. 4. 7. the face of a cherub. In ch. 1. 10, instead of 'the face of a cherub,' it is 'the face of an ox:' hence a cherub was in the likeness of an ox, at least as to its head. The extraordinary shape of these angelic beings, which appeared to the prophet in vision, is manifestly symbolical; for it is not to be supposed that these heavenly beings are really thus formed. The four faces, wings, and the arms of a man, denote the sublime qualities of these immediate ministers of the Deity; qualities entirely essential to fill up the extent of their duty. The face of a man denotes their intelligence; of a lion, their intrepid courage; of an ox, their patience and perseverance in labour; and of an eagle, their great penetration, their sublime sight into heavenly things, and their readiness to rise up into all that is great and divine. The wings being stretched out, signifies their readiness and rapidity in obeying the commands of their Master; the wings bent down, denotes their profound respect before the Lord of the universe; and the man's arms under the wings, shew that zeal produces application and labour.

By stuff our translators meant furniture or goods, as the word frequently denotes in our early writers; but the original, keley, has not only this sense (as in ver. 4), but is also used for any kind of utensils or instruments whatever; and here probably denotes carriages, or other means for removing goods. This was intended to signify that the captivity was at hand. it may. ch. 33. 11. De. 5. 29; 32. 29. Ps. 81. 13. Je. 18. 11; 25. 4-7; 26. 3; 36. 3, 7. Lu. 13. 8, 9, 34; 20. 13. 2 Ti. 2, 25.

6 thou shalt. This intimated, that Zedekiah should steal out of the city in the twilight, carrying on his shoulders some of his property, with his head covered, not only as in distress, but to escape detection. These prophecies, which were accurately fulfilled, are supposed to have been delivered in the sixth year of Zedekiah, five years before the taking of Jerusalem. cover. 1 Sa. 28. 8. 2 Sa. 15. 30. 13 My net. This was to intimate, that though he escaped out of the city, the Chaldeans should overtake him, and carry him to Babylon. Jeremiah had predicted that his 'eyes should see the eyes of the king of Babylon,' and here Ezekiel foretold that he should not see Babylon, though he should die there; and JOSEPHUS says that he thought the two prophecies so inconsistent with each other, that he believed neither; yet both were exactly fulfilled, and the enigma of Ezekiel explained, when Zedekiah was brought to Nebuchadnezzar at Riblah, where he had his eyes put out, and was then carried to Babylon, and there died. ch. 17. 16, 20; 19. 8, 9; 32. 3. Allured by the prosperity of the Egyptians, they also connected themselves with them, and joined in their multiplied and abominable idolatries. And when Jehovah punished them by wars and famines, and by the Philistines, whose daughters are represented as ashamed of their enormous idolatries, instead of being amended, they formed alliances with the Assyrians, and worshipped their gods: and they even followed every idol which was worshipped between Canaan and Chaldea. ver. 37; ch. 23. 22, 25, 28, 29, 46, 47. 39 And I. For the enormous idolatries and cruelties of Judah and Jerusalem, Jehovah determined to gather together the surrounding nations, both those with whom they had formed alliances, as the Egyptians and the Assyrians, and such as had always been inimical to them, as Edom, Ammon, Moab, and Philistia, to inflict, or to witness, his judgments upon them. Having exposed their enormous crimes to view, He would pass sentence upon them: He would give Jerusalem into the hands of the Chaldeans, who would destroy the city and temple which they had polluted; level their cities and high places with the ground; slay, plunder, and enslave the people. they shall throw. ver. 24, 25, 31; ch. 7. 22-24. I. The predictions of the dispersion of Israel, delivered by Moses just before his death, are evidently here referred to: they received a partial accomplishment at the Babylonian captivity, but are more exactly fulfilling at this day. Le. 26. 33. De. 28. 64-68; 32. 26, 27. Ps. 106. 27. Je. 15. 4.

25 I gave. The simple meaning of this place is, that when the Israelites had rebelled against God, despised his statutes, and polluted his sabbaths, in effect cast him off, and given themselves up wholly to their idols, then He, in a just judgment for their disobedience, abandoned them, 'gave them up to a reprobate mind,' (Ro. 1. 28,) and suffered them to walk after the idolatrous, cruel, and impious customs and ordinances of the heathen; by which they were ripened for the destruction which he intended to bring upon them, that they might learn to know God by his judgments, seeing they had despised his mercies. In the same sense God is said judicially to 'send a strong delusion, that they should believe a lie,' to those who 'received not the love of the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness.' ver. 26, 39; ch. 14. 9-11. De. 4. 27, 28; 28. 36. Ps. 81. 12. Is. 66. 4. Ro. 1. 21-28. 2 Th. 2. 9-11.

This often repeated prediction has received a most wonderful accomplishment. For neither the authority, frowns, examples, or favour of their conquerors or powerful neighbours, nor their own fears, hopes, interests, or predilection for the sensual worship of idols, could prevail with them to run into gross idolatry, either during the captivity, or ever afterwards, to the present day, a period of 2414 years!

JOSEPHUS expressly states, that five years after the destruction of Jerusalem, Nebuchadnezzar turned his arms against the Ammonites and Moabites, and entirely subjugated them; and it is probable, that the Arabs, and other nations east of Judah, then took possession of their cities, and enjoyed the fruits of their land. The country of Moab and Ammon is now inhabited by the Bedouin Arabs; where they pasture their flocks, and, no doubt, make the ruins of Rabbah, their once proud capital, 'a stable for camels,' and other cattle. 3 Behold. These verses (3-6) contain a summary prediction of what befel both the continental and insular Tyre, during a long succession of ages. The former was totally destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar, after a siege of thirteen years, B.C. 573; and the latter, which arose out of its ruins, after seventy years recovered its ancient wealth and splendour, as foretold by Isaiah, (ch. 23. 15-17.) After it was taken and burnt by Alexander, B.C. 332, it speedily recovered its strength and dignity, and nineteen years afterwards withstood both the fleets and armies of Antigonus. Agreeably to the prophetic declarations, (Ps. 45. 12; 72. 10. Is. 23. 18. Zec. 9. 1-7,) it was early converted to Christianity; and after being successively taken by the Saracens, Christians, Mamalukes, and Turks, in whose hands it still remains, it became 'a place for the spreading of nets.' I am. ch. 5. 8; 21. 3; 28. 22; 38. 3. 21 Son of man. This prophecy was delivered soon after the Egyptians under Pharaoh-hophra had come to relieve Jerusalem, and some months before that city was taken, being the eleventh year of Jeremiah's captivity, and answering to April 26, A.M. 3416. When the king of Babylon took from the king of Egypt, in the days of Pharaoh-necho, all his dominions in Asia, one of his arms was broken. God now declared that he should never recover these territories, or gain any ascendancy in that part of the world; nay, that his other arm, which was now strong, should soon be broken, and rendered utterly useless. This was fulfilled when Hophra was dethroned and driven into Upper Egypt by Amasis; and then Nebuchadnezzar, taking advantage of this civil discord, invaded and conquered that kingdom, and enslaved, dispersed, and carried captive the Egyptians. I have. ver. 24. 5 his height. The Assyrian king, to whom Pharaoh is compared, from his great power, extensive dominion, and the protection he afforded, resembled the spreading branches, thick shade, and high stature of a flourishing cedar on mount Lebanon. The fruitful lands of Assyria; the immense revenues he drew from vast multitudes in his extensive territories; his lucrative commerce, by the river Tigris, with the countries on the Indian ocean; and all the various sources of his wealth and prosperity, resembled the rivers and streams which cause the trees planted by them to grow and flourish exceedingly; and hence the empire and its head were exalted above all the kingdoms of the earth. 10 If our. The impenitent Jews seem to have charged the prophet's messages with inconsistency: for whilst he warned them to repent, and assured the penitent of forgiveness, he also predicted that the people 'would pine away in their transgressions.' The prediction, however, merely implied that God foresaw that the people in general would be impenitent, though some individuals would repent and be pardoned. ch. 24. 23. CHAP. XXXIV.

A reproof of the shepherds, 1-6. God's judgment against them, 7-10. His providence over his flock, 11-19. The kingdom of Christ, 20-31.

2 the shepherds. The shepherds of Israel, signify their kings and princes, priests and prophets; the flock, the whole of the people; the fat and wool, the tithes and offerings, taxes and imposts: these they exacted with great rigour, and even oppressed and destroyed the people to enrich themselves; but they bestowed no pains to provide for the welfare of the state, or for the souls of those entrusted to them. They knew nothing about their flock: it might be diseased, infirm, bruised, maimed, strayed, or lost, for they watched not over them. ch. 33. 24. Je. 2. 8; 3. 15; 10. 21; 12. 10. 20 they profaned. The Jews, when thus scattered, appeared to them an abject and wretched company of people. They were recognized as the worshippers of Jehovah wherever they went; but they were looked upon as a viler and more worthless race than any of the idolaters among whom they were driven. Many would ascribe their wickedness to the tendency of their religion, which they abhorred, and not to their having acted inconsistently with it; and regard their miseries, not as the punishment of their sins, but as proofs of God's inability to protect them. This profanation of his holy name, Jehovah was determined to wipe away, by shewing mercy unto them. Is. 52. 5. Ro. 2. 24. These. Ex. 32. 11-13. Nu. 14. 15, 16. CHAP. XXXVII.

By the resurrection of dry bones, 1-10, the dead hope of Israel is revived, 11-14. By the uniting of two sticks, 15-17, is shewn the incorporation of Israel into Judah, 18-20. The promises of Christ's kingdom, 21-28.

1 hand. In this vision, the dry bones aptly represent the ruined and desperate state of both Israel and Judah; and the revivification of these bones signifies their restoration to their own land after their captivity, and also their recovery from their present long dispersion. Although this is the primary and genuine scope of the vision, yet the doctrine of a general resurrection of the dead may justly be inferred from it; for 'a simile of the resurrection,' says JEROME, after TERTULLIAN and others, 'would never have been used to signify the restoration of the people of Israel, unless such a future resurrection had been believed and known; because no one attempts to confirm uncertain things by things which have no existence.' ch. 1. 3; 3. 14, 22; 33. 22; 40. 1. 12 Therefore. Job 35. 14, 15. I will open. This is a pointed allusion to the resurrection; under which figure Isaiah (ch. 26. 9) also describes the restoration of the house of Israel, when he says, 'thy dead men shall live;' at which time their bones are said to flourish, (ch. 66. 14,) or to be restored to their former strength and vigour; and, in like manner, St. Paul, (Ro. 11. 15,) expresses their conversion by 'life from the dead.' In the land of their captivity, they seemed as absolutely deprived of their country as persons committed to the grave are cut off from the land of the living; but when Cyrus issued his proclamation, Jehovah, as it were, opened their graves, and when he stirred up their spirits to embrace the proffered liberty, he put his Spirit within them, that they might live; and their re-establishment in their own land evinced the truth of God in the prediction, and his power in its accomplishment. ver. 21. By Magog is most probably meant the Scythians or Tartars, called so by Arabian and Syrian writers, and especially the Turks, who were originally natives of Tartary; and by Rosh, the Russians, descendants of the ancient inhabitants on the river Araxes or Rosh. 16 as a cloud. ver. 9. it shall be. Though it is not generally agreed what people or transactions are here predicted, yet it seems evident that the prophecy is not yet accomplished. Nothing occurred in the wars of Cambyses, or Antiochus Epiphanes with the Jews, that answers to it; and the expression here used, in the latter days, plainly implies, that there should be a succession of many ages between the publication of the prediction and its accomplishment. It is therefore supposed, with much probability, that its fulfilment will be posterior to the conversion of the Jews and their restoration to their own land; and that the Turks, Tartars, or Scythians, from the northern parts of Asia, perhaps uniting with the inhabitants of some more southern regions, will make war upon the Jews, and be cut off in the manner here predicted. ver. 8. 2 I will. It is probable that none of the invaders will escape: but perhaps the inhabitants of Magog in general are meant. The immense army of Gog, led forth against Israel, will almost empty his land; and the subsequent judgments of God upon those that remain at home, will reduce them to a sixth of the whole. 2 the visions. There can be little doubt, that the grand outlines of the description of the temple, in the following extraordinary vision, were taken from that of Solomon's, with all the additions made to it in after ages; and we may suppose that Zerubbabel and the other Jews had respect to it, as far as circumstances would permit, in rebuilding the temple after the captivity. There are, however, many circumstances which conclusively shew, that something infinitely superior to either the first or second temple was intended; and that the external description must be considered as a figure and emblem of spiritual blessings. Probably the more immediate accomplishment of the prophecy will be subsequent to the conversion and restoration of the Jews, the destruction of Gog and Magog, and the pouring out of the Spirit, mentioned at the close of the last chapter; but whether there will be any external forms analogous to these cannot be determined, though in some respects it seems improbable. ch. 1. 1; 8. 3. 10 the little. ver. 7. they three. The entrance into the outer court seems to have been through a porch with doors at both ends; and on each side of this porch were three small chambers, or rooms, for the use of the porters, a reed square in size, with a passage of five cubits between them. The common cubit, termed the 'cubit of a man,' (De. 3. 11,) was about 18 inches; but the cubit used by the angel was, as we learn from ch. 43. 13, 'a cubit and a hand breadth,' or about three inches more than the common cubit, that is, 21 inches. Hence the measuring reed, which was 'six cubits long, by the cubit and the hand breadth,' (ver. 5,) must have been about 10½ feet.

15 the face of the gate. This was the whole length of the porch, from the outward front, (ch. 41. 21, 25,) to the inner side which looks into the first court, (ver. 17,) including the thickness of the walls, (ver. 6,) chambers, (ver. 7,) and spaces between them.

20 the gate. ver. 6. that looked. Heb. whose face was.

21 the little. ver. 7, 10-16, 29, 30, 36, 37. arches. or, galleries, or porches. ver. 16, 26, 30-34. after. ver. 8, 10, 13, 15, 25, 29.

22 palm trees. ver. 16, 31, 37. 1 Ki. 6. 29, 32, 35; 7. 36. 2 Ch. 3. 5. Re. 7. 9. and they. ver. 6, 26, 31, 34, 37, 49. He. 6. 1. before them. Or, 'suitable to them,' that is, to the arches of the east gate. The north gate into the outward court, and every thing belonging to it, were exactly the same as the east gate.

23 the gate of. That is, the gate of the inner court was opposite, and exactly answered to the gate of the outward court, both on the north and east side; and between the gates of the outward and inner court was a space of an hundred cubits. ver. 19, 27, 28, 44. and he. Ex. 27. 9-18; 38. 9-12.

24 and behold. ver. 6, 20, 35; ch. 46. 9. and he. ver. 21, 28, 29, 33, 35, 36. according. That is, according to the measures of the eastern and northern gates. There does not appear to have been any gates on the west, though the courts seem to have extended to the western wall.

25 windows. ver. 16, 22, 29. Jno. 12. 46. 1 Co. 13. 12. 2 Pe. 1. 19. the length. ver. 21, 33.

26 seven. ver. 6, 22. 2 Pe. 3. 18. palm trees. ver. 16, 22. Ps. 92. 12, 13. Ca. 7. 7, 8.

27 in the. ver. 23, 32. and he. ver. 19, 23, 47.

28 he brought. As the outward court inclosed the inner, the prophet was led from the south gate of the outward court to the south gate of the inner, which was opposite it, and so into the inner court itself. according. ver. 32, 35.

29 the little. The entrance into the inner court seems to have been through a portico, exactly like that at each gate of the outward court; but the ascent was by eight steps, instead of seven. ver. 7, 10, 12. 1 Ch. 28. 11, 12. 2 Ch. 31. 11. Ne. 13. 5, 9. Je. 35. 2-4; 36. 10. and there. ver. 16, 22, 25.

30 the arches. These are supposed to have been built over the spaces which separated the little chambers, or porters' lodges. five and. ver. 21, 25, 29, 33, 36. five cubits. Instead of five cubits, it seems evident, from the parallel places, that we should read twenty-five: the word ésrim appears to have been lost out of the text. broad. Heb. breadth.

31 and palm. ver. 26, 34. eight. ver. 22, 26, 34, 37.

32 into the. ver. 28-31, 35.

33 it was. ver. 21, 25, 36.

34 palm trees. That is, probably, the capital of each pillar was ornamented with sculpture, representing leaves or branches of the palm tree. eight steps. ver. 6, 22, 26, 31, 34, 37, 49.

35 to the. ver. 27, 32; ch. 44. 4; 47. 2. measured. The north gate, as well as the east, was built in the same manner, and of the same dimensions, as the south gate. See the parallel passages.

36 little. ver. 21, 29, 36.

37 the posts. ver. 31, 34. the utter court. That is, 'the outer court,' as the word utter primarily denotes.

38 the chambers. ver. 12; ch. 41. 10, 11. 1 Ki. 6 8. where. This place, where the legs and entrails of the sacrifices, especially of the burnt offerings, were washed, was just within the portico of the north entrance to the inner court, or court of the priests. An allusion to this is most probably made by the inspired apostle when writing his Epistle to the Hebrews, at the 10th chapter and 22nd verse. 'Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water.' Le. 1. 9; 8. 21. He. 10. 22.

39 tables on that. ch. 41. 22; 44. 16. Mal. 1. 7, 12. Lu. 22. 30. 1 Co. 10. 16-21. the burnt. Le. 1. 3, etc. the sin. Le. 4. 2, 3, 13, etc. Is. 53. 5, 10. 2 Co. 5. 21. the trespass. Le. 5. 6, etc.; 6. 6; 7. 1, 2.

40 at the side. Two tables were on each side, as you come into the porch of the gate; and two on each side of the inner part of the gate that looked towards the altar; in all eight tables, on which they slew and cut up the victims. It does not appear that any such tables were used either in the tabernacle or temple; and this seems to intimate the introduction of a new and more spiritual dispensation. See the references. as one goeth up. or, at the step. ver. 35.

43 within. These were probably for hanging up the victims in order to flay them. hooks. or, end-irons, or, the two hearth-stones. upon. Le. 1. 6, 8; 8. 20.

44 the inner. ver. 23, 27. chambers. ver. 7, 10, 29. 1 Ch. 6. 31, 32; 16. 41-43; 25. 1, etc. Ep. 5. 19. Col. 3. 16.

45 chamber. The word chamber probably here denotes a row of chambers, of which there seems to have been three: one for the singers; one for the priests who in their courses took charge of the sacred vessels and treasures; and one for the priests who attended on the altar and sacrifices. whose. ch. 8. 5. the keepers. Le. 8. 35. 47 court. This was the inner court, or court of the priests, which was of the same dimensions with each division of the outer court; and the altar stood directly before the porch of the temple. an hundred cubits long. ver. 19, 23, 27.

48 the porch. The length of the porch was twenty cubits, the same as the breadth of the temple, and the breadth eleven cubits, that is, one cubit more than in Solomon's temple. Two bivalve, or folding doors, each leaf of them being three cubits wide, seem to have formed the entrance; which, with five cubits, perhaps of brick or stone work, on each side, called 'the post of the porch,' amount to sixteen cubits; and the other four cubits may be supposed to have been the distance from these posts to the outside of the walls of the temple. 1 Ki. 6. 3. 2 Ch. 3. 4.

49 the steps. This was a flight of steps which led from the inner court into the temple. ver. 31, 34, 37. pillars. 1 Ki. 7. 15-21. 2 Ch. 3. 17. Je. 52. 17-23. Re. 3. 12.

CHAP. XLI.

The measures, parts, chambers, and ornaments of the temple.

1 he brought. ch. 40. 2, 3, 17. to the temple. 1 Ki. 6. 2. Zec. 6. 12, 13. Ep. 2. 20-22. 1 Pe. 2. 5. Re. 3. 12; 11. 1, 2; 21. 3, 15. the posts. These were probably a sort of door-case on each side of the entrance; and the tabernacle perhaps was a kind of covering to the door, of the same dimensions.

2 the door. or, the entrance. This was the door out of the porch into the sanctuary, which seems to have been wider than that from the court to the porch. Ex. 26. 36; 36. 37. 1 Ki. 6. 31-35. 2 Ch. 3. 7; 29. 7. Jno. 10. 7, 9. the length. 1 Ki. 6. 2, 17. 2 Ch. 3. 3.

3 two cubits. This was the thickness of the partition wall between the sanctuary (ver. 2) and holy of holies (ver. 4); the breadth of the wall on each side of the gate being seven cubits, and the entrance into the holy place six cubits in width.

4 twenty cubits. 1 Ki. 6. 20. 2 Ch. 3. 8. Re. 21. 16. This. Ex. 26. 33, 34. He. 9. 3-8.

5 side chamber. ver. 6, 7; ch. 42. 3-14. 1 Ki. 6. 5, 6.

6 one over another. Heb. side chamber over side chamber. thirty in order. or, three and thirty times, or feet. We find by JOSEPHUS, that around Solomon's temple were chambers three stories high, each story consisting of thirty chambers; which are supposed to have been on the north, south, and east sides of the temple. and they. 1 Ki. 6. 6, 10. have hold. Heb. be holden. 1 Pe. 1. 5. but. That is, the beams or supporters, of the chambers were not let into the main wall of the temple; but rested on projections of the outer wall, which became a cubit narrower at every story, leaving a ledge of one cubit, to support the beams.

7 there was, etc. Heb. it was, made broader, and went round. 1 Ki. 6. 8. Mat. 13. 32. He. 6. 1. an enlarging. In the same proportion in which the thickness of the wall decreased, the chambers increased, so that the middle story was one cubit larger, and the upper story two cubits larger, than the lower rooms; and a winding staircase, which widened in the same manner as the rooms, ascended from the bottom to the top.

8 a full. ch. 40. 5. Re. 21. 16.

9 was five. ver. 5. that which. This appears to have been a walk, or gallery of communication between the chambers, five cubits broad, into which the doors opened. ver. 11; ch. 42. 1, 4.

10 the chambers. As the word rendered chambers is different from that used before, it is supposed there was another row of buildings, parallel with the side chambers, with a passage of twenty cubits between.

11 and the breadth. ver. 9; ch. 42. 4.

12 separate. ver. 13-15; ch. 42. 1, 10, 13. Re. 21. 27; 22. 14, 15. the wall. This appears to have been a building erected at the west end of the temple.

13 he measured. These verses (13-15) seem to intimate, that all the buildings of the temple occupied an area of 100 square cubits.

15 galleries. or, several walks, or walks with pillars. ch. 42. 3. Ca. 1. 17; 7. 5. Zec. 3. 7. with the. ver. 17; ch. 42. 15.

16 narrow. ver. 26; ch. 40. 16, 25. 1 Ki. 6. 4. 1 Co. 13. 12. ceiled with wood. Heb. ceiling of wood. 1 Ki. 6. 15. 2 Ch. 3. 5. Hag. 1. 4. from the ground up to the windows. or, the ground unto the windows. covered. Probably either by the jutting out of the main wall of the temple; or by lattice work, or curtains, or by both.

17 To that. That is, the windows were placed above the height of the door, at the east end of the temple, and thus continued, at the same height, and at measured distances, along both sides of the holy place, to the wall of the inner sanctuary, in which there were no windows. measure. Heb. measures.

18 with cherubims. 1 Ki. 6. 29-32; 7. 36. 2 Ch. 3. 7. palm trees. ch. 40. 16, 22. Re. 7. 9. and every. ch. 1. 10; 10. 14, 21. Re. 4. 7-9.

21 posts. Heb. post. ch. 40. 14. 1 Ki. 6. 33, marg.

22 altar. This must signify the altar of incense; which, both in the tabernacle and Solomon's temple, was covered with plates of gold. It is very remarkable, that in this temple described by Ezekiel, there is not the least mention of gold or silver, though there was such a profusion of these metals in the former; which may probably imply, that a glory of a more spiritual nature was intended under these emblems. Ex. 30. 1-3; 1 Ki. 6. 20, 22; 7. 48. 2 Ch. 4. 19. Re. 8. 3. This is. ch. 23. 41; 44. 16. Ex. 25. 28-30. Le. 24. 6. Pr. 9. 2. Ca. 1. 12. Mal. 1. 7, 12. 1 Co. 10. 21. Re. 3. 20. before. Ex. 30. 8.

CHAP. XLII.

The chambers for the priests, 1-12. The use thereof, 13, 14. The measures of the outward court, 15-20.

1 he brought. ch. 40. 2, 3, 24; 41. 1. the utter court. ch. 40. 20. Re. 11. 2. chamber. This seems to denote a row of chambers in three stories; which appear to have been situated in the inner court, (here called the outer court in reference to the temple, ver. 13, 14,) just before the separate place, at the entrance from the north. ver. 4; ch. 41. 9, 12-15.

2 Before. Perhaps this means, that the north door was 100 cubits from the entrance into the court; and that the door-way, or portico, was 50 cubits in length; or, that it faced one of the cloisters, the length of which was 100 cubits, and its breadth 50, which was the proportion of all the cloisters.

3 Over. One side of these buildings looked upon the void space about the temple of twenty cubits, and the other toward the pavement belonging to the outer court. the twenty. ch. 41. 10. the pavement. ch. 40. 17, 18. 2 Ch. 7. 3. gallery against. ch. 41. 15, 16. Ca. 1. 17; 7. 5.

4 before. There seems to have been two rows of these chambers, and a walk between of ten cubits in width; with an entrance into it from the chambers, of one cubit in width. a walk. ver. 11. a way. Mat. 7. 14. Lu. 13. 24.

5 were higher than these. or, did eat of these. than the lower, and than the middlemost of the building. or, and the building consisted of the lower and the middlemost.

6 ch. 41. 6. 1 Ki. 6. 8.

8 before. Passing from the north to the south side of the temple, (ver. 11, 12,) the prophet was shewn that the space of ground, which was before the temple on the east, measured 100 cubits.

9 from under. or, from the place of. ch. 46. 19. the entry. or, he that brought me. as one goeth. or, as he came.

10 the thickness. Rather, 'the breadth of the wall,' that is, the breadth of ground which it enclosed. ch. 41. 12. over against. These south chambers were exactly like those on the north. ver. 1, 13; ch. 41. 13-15.

15 measuring. ch. 41. 2-5, 15. gate. ch. 40. 6, etc.

16 side. Heb. wind. the measuring reed. Estimating the reed at 10½ feet, 500 reeds will be nearly equal to a mile; so that from this statement we find the temple, with its outbuildings, was built on a square, nearly an English mile on each side, and four miles in circumference. This not only far exceeds the size of Solomon's temple, or that after the captivity, which was only 500 cubits, or a furlong, on each side, and exactly half a mile in circuit; but is nearly equal to the whole extent of Jerusalem itself, which, when greatest, was but 33 furlongs in circumference, somewhat less than 4¼ miles. This seems clearly to intimate, that the vision cannot be explained of any temple that has hitherto been built, or indeed of any literal temple, but figuratively and mystically of the spiritual temple, the church under the gospel, and its spiritual glory. ch. 40. 3. Zec. 2. 1. Re. 11. 1, 2.

Hence the upper part of the altar was only twelve cubits square, (ver. 16,) the upper settle, or ledge, being in all fourteen cubits, (ver. 17,) deducting two cubits from its dimensions. Though this altar was the same in height and breadth with that of Solomon, yet it differed materially from it in having settles or ledges; on which the priests walked round the altar, to officiate in offering sacrifices.

3 for. ch. 46. 2, 8. 2 Ch. 23. 13; 34. 31. the prince. It is probable that the prince mentioned here and elsewhere, does not mean the Messiah, but the ruler of the Jewish nation for the time being. For it is not only directed where he should sit in the temple, and eat his portion of the sacrifices, and when and how he should go out; but it is also ordered (ch. 45. 22,) that at the passover he shall offer a bullock, a sin offering for himself and the people; and to guard him against any temptation of oppressing the people, he had a provision of land allotted to him, (ch. 45. 8,) out of which he is to give an inheritance for his sons, (ch. 46. 18.) These appear plainly to be political rules for common princes, and for a succession of them; but as no such rules were observed under the second temple, the fulfilment of it must still be future. ch. 34. 24; 37. 25. It is observable, that the table in the sanctuary is mentioned rather than the altar of incense; perhaps intimating the change in the external institutions of Divine worship which should take place before the accomplishment of the prophecy. It is not easy to determine, whether any external regulations, with respect to Divine ordinances, answerable to these predictions, will be made among the converted Jews, when reinstated in their own land, or not. ch. 41. 22. Pr. 3. 9. an holy portion. Heb. holiness. Zec. 14. 20, 21. the length. That our translators rightly added the word reeds, is evident from the length and breadth of the sanctuary being exactly the same as before, (comp. ver. 2, with ch. 42. 16-19.) Estimating the reed at 3½ yards, this holy oblation would constitute a square of nearly fifty miles on every side. From the north side a portion of nearly twenty miles in width, and nearly fifty in length, was appointed for the priests; and in the midst of this portion, the area of the sanctuary, about a mile square, to be enclosed by a wall, (ver. 1, 2.) Next to this, on the south, was the Levites' portion, of the same dimensions as that of the priests, (ver. 5;) and south of this was the portion for the city, of the same length as those of the priests and Levites, but only half the width, (ver. 6.) These three formed the square of 25,000 reeds, or nearly fifty miles; and that set apart for the prince, the breadth of which is not mentioned, extended in length from north to south, along the east and west sides of the square. As Canaan would not admit of so large a portion for the sanctuary, etc., this was no doubt intended to intimate the large extent of the church in the glorious times predicted.

8 and my princes. In the predicted period, not only shall the ministers and worshippers of God be liberally provided for, but the princes will be both able and willing to defray the expenses of government, without oppressing their subjects, and will rule over them with equity and clemency, as the vicegerents of God; while the people will submit to them conscientiously, and live in peace, prosperity, and holiness. These things seem to be represented in language taken from the customs of the times in which the prophet wrote. Tithes are not mentioned in any part of the vision, which shews that the ritual Mosaic law will not be in force. ch. 19. 3-7; 22. 27; 46. 18. Pr. 28. 16. Is. 11. 3-5; 32. 1, 2; 60. 17, 18. 17 the prince's. The prince is never mentioned in the ritual appointments of Moses, but here he is required to provide the oblations; and the variations in the Mosaic law, in the number of the several sacrifices, and the proportion of the meat offering to each, being ten times as much as the law prescribed, with several other circumstances, seem more like enacting a new law, than enforcing that of Moses. These variations may intimate a change in the external constitution of the church; and it is probable that they are to be understood emblematically. ch. 46. 4-12. 2 Sa. 6. 19. 1 Ki. 8. 63, 64. 1 Ch. 16. 2, 3; 29. 3-9. 2 Ch. 5. 6; 7. 4, 5; 8. 12, 13; 30. 24; 31. 3; 35. 7, 8. Ordinances for the prince in his worship, 1-8; and for the people, 9-15. An order for the prince's inheritance, 16-18. The courts for boiling and baking, 19-24.

1 Thus saith. Whether the rules for public worship here laid down were designed to be observed in those things wherein they differed from the law of Moses, in the ministrations of the second temple, is not certain. In the latter history of the Jewish church, the law of Moses only was followed, except in the corruption of following the traditions of the fathers. The gate. The prophet had before observed that the east gate of the outer court was shut, and was told that it must only be opened for the prince; and now he is informed that the gate of the inner court on the east was also shut, and is to be opened only on the sabbath and new moons, till the evening. shall be shut. ch. 44. 1, 2. six working. Ge. 3. 19. The whole of this seems to intimate the constant, reverential, and exemplary attendance of kings on the pure ordinances of religion, in the approaching flourishing days of the church. he shall worship. 1 Ki. 8. 22, 23. 1 Ch. 17. 16; 29. 10-12. 2 Ch. 6. 13; 29. 29. 4 the burnt. The proportions of the burnt offerings, and also of the meat and drink offerings, are very different here from those prescribed in the Mosaic law. The meat offering, under the law, was only three tenths of an ephah to a bullock, two tenths for a ram, and one tenth for a lamb, with the fourth part of a hin of oil. ch. 45. 17. Nu. 28. 9, 10.

9 when the people. This may intimate, that every thing should be regulated, in divine worship, so as to prevent disorder and interruption, and also that men should go forward and make progress in religion, and not turn their backs upon God. come before. Ex. 23. 14-17; 34. 23. 13 Thou shalt daily. It is observable, that there is nothing said about the evening sacrifice, or the additional lamb, morning and evening, on the sabbath, which makes an important difference between this and the old laws; and is probably an intimation of that change in the external forms of religion which the coming of the Messiah should introduce. 19 the entry. This entry was at the west side of the north gate of the inner court. ch. 40. 44-46; 42. 9. (see ch. 44. 4, 5.) a place. This place was at the west corners of the inner court, or court of the priests; where they prepared the most holy things, the trespass and sin offering, which none but the priests might eat; that they might not 'bear them out into the utter court, to sanctify the people,' that is, by touching them incapacitate them from discharging their ordinary occupations.

21 in every corner of the court there was a court. Heb. a court in a corner of a court; and a court in a corner of a court.

22 courts. These courts in the corners of the outer court, or court of the people, appear to have been a kind of uncovered apartments, surrounded with little chambers for the cooks, and used for dressing the peace offerings of the people. On these their families and friends feasted; and portions were sent to the poor, the widow, and the orphan; and thus the spirit of devotion preserved the spirit of mercy, charity, and benevolence, in the land. joined. or, made with chimneys. *corners. A fountain producing abundance of water was not in the temple, and could not be there on the top of such a hill; and consequently these waters, as well as those spoken of by Joel and Zechariah, must be understood figuratively and typically. These waters doubtless were an emblem of the 'gospel preached with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven;' and their gradual rise beautifully represents its progress, from small beginnings to an immensely large increase; and the latter part of the representation may relate to the times when it shall fill the earth, and produce the most extensive and important effects on the state of mankind in every nation. The ten tribes, as well as Judah and Benjamin, were to be admitted to a full share in this inheritance, which seems to imply, that the future restoration to the promised land is predicted; while the admission of strangers who sojourned in the land, to a share in the inheritance, as if native Israelites, plainly intimates the calling of the Gentiles into the church, and their joint inheritance of its privileges, and of the heavenly felicity. Hasarenan. ch. 48. 1. This division of the land entirely differs from that which was made in the days of Joshua, in which the tribes were not only differently placed, but confused and intermixed; while here distinct lots are assigned to each of the twelve tribes, in a regular mathematical form. Literally such a division never took place: it seems to denote the equality of privileges which subsists among all the tribes of Believers, of whatever nation, and whatever their previous character may have been. Manasseh. Ge. 30. 22-24; 41. 51; 48. 5, 14-20. 15 a profane. ch. 22. 26; 42. 20; 44. 23; 45. 6. for the city. The holy oblation of 25,000 square reeds, or near fifty square miles, was divided into three parts from north to south (see on ch. 45. 1): a portion on the north of 10,000 reeds in width, and 25,000 in length, for the priests, in the midst of which was the sanctuary or temple, surrounded by a wall 500 reeds square, (ver. 9, 10; see on ch. 42. 15;) next to this another portion of the same dimensions for the Levites, (ver. 13, 14;) and on the south another portion of the same length, but only 5000 reeds in breadth, for the city, (ver. 15.) The city was situated in the midst of this portion, being 4500 reeds, or about nine miles square, (see on ver. 30,) having a suburb of 250 reeds, or about half a mile, on each side, (ver. 17,) leaving 10,000 reeds or nearly ten miles, on the east side, and the same on the west side, for the profit of those who serve the city out of all the tribes, (ver. 18, 19.) On the east and west sides of this square of 25,000 reeds, is the portion of the prince; each of which, estimating the breadth of the land at 150 miles, would form a square of fifty miles. Thus the whole plan of the division of the country, laying out of the city, temple, and all its appendages, is perfectly regular and uniform; and would therefore convey to the minds of the Jews the most complete idea they were capable of conceiving of the most perfect church, commonwealth, city, temple, and conveniences, on the largest and grandest scale for the Divine worship; and it doubtless ultimately points out the land of Immanuel, the city of the New Jerusalem, and his temple, the Christian church, the house of the living God. 1 Ti. 3. 15.

Re. 21. 16. four. It is certainly most obvious to interpret these measures, not of cubits, but of the measuring reed which the prophet's conductor had in his hand; according to which, the city would be about thirty-six miles in circumference, and nine miles on each side of the square; which was nearly nine times larger than the greatest extent to which Jerusalem ever attained, (See on ver. 15; ch. 42. 16.) The large dimensions of the city and land were perhaps intended to intimate the extensive and glorious propagation of the gospel in the times predicted; and the land was not called Canaan, nor the city Jerusalem, probably because they were figurative of spiritual blessings to the church and to Israel.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF EZEKIEL.

THE character of Ezekiel, as a WRITER and a POET, is thus admirably drawn by the masterly hand of Bishop LOWTH: 'Ezekiel is much inferior to Jeremiah in elegance; in sublimity he is not even excelled by Isaiah; but his sublimity is of a totally different kind. He is deep, vehement, tragical; his sentiments are elevated, animated, full of fire and indignation; his imagery is crowded, magnificent, terrific; his language is grand, solemn, austere, rough, and at times unpolished; he abounds in repetitions, not for the sake of grace or elegance, but from vehemence and indignation. Whatever subject he treats of, that he sedulously pursues; from that he rarely departs, but cleaves, as it were, to it; whence the connexion is in general evident and well preserved. In other respects he may perhaps be exceeded by the other prophets; but, for that species of composition to which he seems adapted by natural gifts, the forcible, impetuous, grave, and grand, not one of the sacred writers is superior to him. His diction is sufficiently perspicuous; all his obscurity arises from the nature of his subjects. Visions (as for instance, among others, those of Hosea, Amos, and Zechariah,) are necessarily dark and confused. The greater part of Ezekiel, particularly towards the middle of the book, is poetical, whether we regard the matter or the language.' Abp. NEWCOME judiciously observes, THE PROPHET is not to be considered merely as a poet, or as a framer of those august and astonishing visions, and of those admirable poetical representations, which he committed to writing; but as an instrument in the hands of GOD, who vouchsafed to reveal himself, through a long succession of ages, not only in divers parts constituting a magnificent and uniform whole, but also in different manners, as by voice, by dreams, by inspiration, and by plain or enigmatical vision. 'Ezekiel is a great poet, full of originality; and, in my opinion, whoever censures him as if he were only an imitator of the old prophets, can never have felt his power. He must not, in general, be compared with Isaiah, and the rest of the old prophets. Those are great, Ezekiel is also great; those in their manner of poetry, Ezekiel in his.' To justify this character the learned prelate descends to particulars, and gives apposite examples, not only of the clear, flowing, and nervous, but also of the sublime; and concludes his observations on his style, by stating it to be his deliberate opinion, that if his 'style is the old age of the Hebrew language and composition, (as has been alleged,) it is a firm and vigorous one, and should induce us to trace its youth and manhood with the most assiduous attention.' As a Prophet, Ezekiel must ever be allowed to occupy a very high rank; and few of the prophets have left a more valuable treasure to the church of God than he has. It is true, he is in several places obscure; but this resulted either from the nature of his subjects, or the events predicted being still unfulfilled; and, when time has rolled away the mist of futurity, successive generations will then perceive with what heavenly wisdom this much neglected prophet has spoken. There is, however, a great proportion of his work which is free from every obscurity, and highly edifying. He has so accurately and minutely foretold the fate and condition of various nations and cities, that nothing can be more interesting than to trace the exact accomplishment of these prophecies in the accounts furnished by historians and travellers; while, under the elegant type of a new temple to be erected, a new worship to be introduced, and a new Jerusalem to be built, with new land to be allotted to the twelve tribes, may be discovered the vast extent and glory of the New Testament Church.

Hence ATHENÆUS calls the beasts served up at the tables of the Persian kings, ιερια, victims. Daniel was therefore resolved not to defile himself with their viands; yet he did not rudely refuse what was intended as a kindness, but mildly and modestly requested the proper officers to indulge him in this respect. CHAP. III.

Nebuchadnezzar dedicates a golden image in Dura, 1-7. Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego are accused for not worshipping the image, 8-12. They being threatened, make a good confession, 13-18. They are cast into the furnace, 19-23, from which God delivers them, 24-27. Nebuchadnezzar seeing the miracle blesses God, and advances them, 28-30.

2 Belshazzar. Belshazzar is said by JOSEPHUS to be the same as Naboandelus, the Nabonadius of PTOLEMY, and the Labynetus of HERODOTUS. 13 Art thou. Though Daniel was one of the chief ministers of state, who did 'the king's business' in the palace, (ch. 8. 27,) yet Belshazzar seems to have known nothing of him. This shews that he was a weak and vicious prince, who minded pleasure more than business, according to the character given him by historians. He appears to have left the care of public affairs to his mother, Nitocris, a lady celebrated for her wisdom, who evidently knew Daniel well, and probably constantly employed him in the government of the kingdom. ver. 11; ch. 1. 21; 2. 48; 8. 1, 27. the children. ch. 2. 25; 6. 13. Re. 1. 17. from. Daniel, as Bp. Newton observes, was now very far advanced in years; for the third year of Cyrus was the 73rd of his captivity; and being a youth when carried captive, he cannot be supposed to have been less than ninety. Old as he was, 'he set his heart to understand' the former revelations which had been made to him, and particularly the vision of the ram and he-goat, as may be collected from the sequel; and for this purpose he prayed and fasted three weeks. His fasting and prayers had the desired effect, for an angel was sent to unfold to him those mysteries; and whoever would excel in divine knowledge, must imitate Daniel, and habituate himself to study, temperance, and devotion. ver. 2, 3; ch. 9. 3, 4, 20-23. 19 but. From the preceding verses in this chapter let us learn, 1. That God, in his providence, sets up one and pulls down another, as he pleases. 2. That this world is full of wars and fightings, which result from the indulgence of the lusts of men. 3. That all the changes and revolutions of states were plainly and perfectly foreseen by the God of heaven. 4. That no word of God can fall to the ground, but what he has declared shall infallibly come to pass. For the elucidation of the historical parts of Scripture, it is advantageous to notice the writings of heathen authors: light is thus thrown on many passages of Holy Writ, by shewing the accomplishment of the prophecies therein contained, or customs elucidated, which, in the course of years, or in our more northern latitude, would be to us inexplicable. We have therefore reason to bless God for human learning, by which many have done great service to the readers of His blessed word. Job 20. 8. Ps. 27. 2; 37. 36. Je. 46. 6. Eze. 26. 21.

The conversion of Constantine, though it stopped the rage of persecution, gave but little help to true religion. The power first exercised by the emperors, in calling and influencing ecclesiastical councils, gradually passed into the hands of the clergy; and the bishop and church of Rome at last carried it to an enormous length, magnifying themselves above every god. exalt. ch. 7. 8, 20, 25. 2 A day of darkness. 'The quantity of these insects,' says a French author, 'is incredible to all who have not themselves witnessed their astonishing numbers; the whole earth is covered with them for the space of several leagues. The noise they make in browsing on the trees and herbage may be heard at a great distance, and resembles that of an army in secret. Wherever their myriads spread, the verdure of the country disappears; trees and plants, stripped of their leaves and reduced to their naked boughs and stems, cause the dreary image of winter to succeed in an instant to the rich scenery of spring. When these clouds of locusts take their flight, to surmount any obstacles or to traverse more rapidly a desert soil, the heavens may literally be said to be obscured by them.' ver. 10, 31; ch. 3. 14, 15. CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF JOEL.

It is generally supposed, that the prophet Joel blends two subjects of affliction in one general consideration, or beautiful allegory; and that, under the devastation to be produced by locusts in the vegetable world, he pourtrays the more distant calamities to be inflicted by the armies of the Chaldeans in their invasion of Judea. These predictions are followed by a more general denunciation of God's vengeance, delivered in such language as to be in some measure descriptive of the final judgment of mankind. The prophet intermingles these declarations with earnest exhortations to repentance, and with promises of returning prosperity productive of Gospel blessings; foretelling, in the clearest terms, the general effusion of the Holy Spirit under the Christian dispensation, and the awful consequences of obstinately rejecting the sacred influence, especially to the Jews. The state of this nation at the present day, fully attests the Divine inspiration of the prophecy.

6 Thus saith. Amos, says Abp. NEWCOME, first prophesies against the Syrians, Philistines, Tyrians, Edomites, Ammonites, and Moabites, who dwelt in the neighbourhood of the twelve tribes, and had occasionally become their enemies and persecutors. Having thus taught his countrymen that the providence of God extended to other nations, he briefly mentions the idolatrous practices and consequent destruction of Judah, and then passes on to his proper subject, which was to exhort and reprove the kingdom of Israel, and to denounce against it the Divine judgments. For three. ch. 6. 8-7. 2 Ki. 17. 7-18; 18. 12. Ac. 9. 36. Tarshish. As Jonah embarked at Joppa, a sea-port on the Mediterranean, it was probably either Tarsus in Cilicia, or rather Tartessus in Spain, to which he intended to flee. When we reflect how such a message would be received in the streets of London at this day, we shall not wonder at the prophet's reluctance to announce the destruction of the proud and idolatrous Nineveh. Jonah, sent again, preaches to the Ninevites, 1-4. Upon their repentance, 5-9, God repents, 10.

1 the word. ch. 1. 1. the second. Jno. 21. 15-17.

2 Nineveh. Nineveh, the capital of Assyria, was situated on the eastern bank of the river Tigris, opposite the present Mosul, about 280 miles north of Babylon, 400 N.E. of Damascus, in lat. 36° 20′ N. long. 78° 10′ E. It was not only a very ancient, (Ge. 10. 11,) but also a very great city. STRABO says that it was much larger than Babylon, the circuit of which he estimates at 385 furlongs; and, according to DIODORUS SICULUS, it was an oblong parallelogram, extending 150 furlongs in length, 90 in breadth, and 480 in circumference, i.e. about 20 miles long, 12 broad, and 60 in compass. This agrees with the account given here of its being 'an exceeding great city of three days' journey,' i.e. in circuit; for 20 miles a day was the common computation for a pedestrian. It was surrounded by large walls 100 feet high, so broad that three chariots could drive abreast on them, and defended by 1500 towers 200 feet in height. See Notes on Nahum. ver. 3; ch. 1. 2; Zep. 2. 13-15. preach. Je. 1. 17; 15. 19-21. Eze. 2. 7; 3. 17. Mat. 3. 8. Jno. 5. 14.

He. 3. 7, 8. Arise. The manner of raising attention, says Abp. Newcome, in ver. 1, 2, by calling a man to urge his plea in the face of all nature, and on the inanimate creation to hear the expostulation of Jehovah with his people, is truly awakening and magnificent. The words of Jehovah follow in ver. 3-5; and God's mercies having been set before the people, one of them is introduced in a beautiful manner, asking what his duty is towards so gracious a God, ver. 6, 7. The answer follows in the words of the prophet, ver. 8. contend. De. 4. 26; 32. 1. Ps. 50. 1, 4. Is. 1. 2. Je. 22. 29. Eze. 36. 1, 8. Lu. 19. 40. before. or, with. ch. 1. 4. 18 Thy shepherds. That is, the rulers and tributary princes, who, as HERODOTUS informs us, deserted Nineveh in the day of her distress, and came not to her succour. DIODORUS also says, that when the enemy shut up the king in the city, many nations revolted; each going over to the besiegers for the sake of their liberty; that the king despatched messengers to all his subjects, requiring power from them to succour him, and that he thought himself able to endure the siege, and remained in expectation of armies which were to be raised throughout his empire, relying on the oracle, that the city would not be taken till the river became its enemy. 9 Ye looked. They had used all proper means in the cultivation of their lands, and had 'sown much;' but when they rationally entertained the most sanguine expectations of a large increase, they were strangely disappointed; and even what they had brought home was unaccountably wasted, as if the Lord had 'blown upon it,' and driven it away! And the reason was, because they neglected the temple, and left it in ruins, whilst they eagerly employed themselves in building and decorating their own houses; therefore they were visited by drought and famine, and by various diseases on man and beast. ver. 6; ch. 2. 16, 17. Ja. 2. 1. saith. Whoever compares the description of the temple of Solomon, in the first book of Kings, with the most splendid accounts of the second temple, however adorned with costly stones and other magnificent decorations in after ages, must perceive that the former, being wholly overlaid with pure gold, was incomparably more glorious than the latter in its greatest magnificence; and the Jews themselves allow that the ark of the covenant, fire from heaven, the Urim and Thummim, the anointing oil, the Shechinah, or visible glory, and the spirit of prophecy, which distinguished the former temple, were wanting in this. In nothing, in fact, could the second temple excel the first in glory, except in the personal presence of 'the Desire of all nations,' He who is 'the glory of the Lord,' and the true temple, 'in whom dwells all the fulness of the Godhead bodily,' and who was the true Shechinah, of which that of Solomon's temple was merely a type. And if it be admitted that the presence of the promised Messiah was intended, then it will follow that 'Jesus of Nazareth' was He; for the second temple, in which as the 'Prince of peace' he preached peace and reconciliation with God, has been utterly destroyed for upwards of seventeen hundred years. give. Ps. 85. 8, 9. 6 This is an ephah. 'The meaning of this vision,' says Archbishop NEWCOME, 'seems to be, that the Babylonish captivity had happened on account of the wickedness of the Jews, and that a like dispersion would befal them if they relapsed into like crimes.' The woman who sat in the ephah was an emblem of the Jewish nation; the casting the weight of lead on the mouth of the ephah seems to mean the condemnation of the Jews, after they had filled up the measure of their iniquities by crucifying the Messiah; the 'two women, with wings like a stork, and the wind in their wings,' seem emblematical of the Roman armies and the rapidity of their conquests; and their lifting up the ephah and carrying it through the air, to build it a house in Shinar or Babylon, where it was fixed on its own basis, represents the taking of Jerusalem, the dispersion of the Jews, and the long continuance of that calamity, as a just punishment of their unbelief. A SUMMARY VIEW

PRINCIPAL EVENTS OF THE PERIOD

FROM THE CLOSE OF THE

SACRED CANON OF THE OLD TESTAMENT,

UNTIL THE

TIMES OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

ARTAXERXES LONGIMANUS, king of Persia, who in his twentieth year had commissioned Nehemiah to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem, being dead, was succeeded, after the short reigns of Xerxes the second and Sogdianus, by his son Darius Nothus. B.C. 423.

In the eleventh year of this prince's reign died Eliashib the high priest, after having filled the sacred office for thirty-four or forty years; and was succeeded by his son Jehoiada, or Joiada, the father of that Manasseh whom Nehemiah forced to retire to Samaria, on account of his attachment to his idolatrous wife. It is uncertain how long Nehemiah lived at Jerusalem after his important reformations; but after his death Judea seems to have been added to the prefecture of Syria, and became wholly subject to the governor of that province. Darius Nothus was succeeded by Artaxerxes Mnemon; in B.C. 405. the thirty-fourth year of whose reign, Jeshua being appointed by the Persian governor of Syria to supersede his brother Johanan, or Jonathan, who had succeeded his father Joiada in the high priesthood, was slain by him in the inner court of the temple. For this atrocious act, the governor imposed a fine of fifty drachmas on every lamb that should be offered in sacrifice; the total amount of which has been calculated at somewhat more than 1700*l.* per annum. The payment of this fine, however, continued only till the death of Artaxerxes Mnemon, which happened seven years after. But the Jews were B.C. 359. not long allowed to enjoy a state of peace and prosperity, for Ochus, who succeeded Artaxerxes, having subdued the greater part of Phœnicia, with which Lesser Asia and Syria had revolted on his accession to the throne, marched into Judea, took Jericho, and carried away a great number of captives; part of whom he sent into Egypt, and settled the rest in Hyrcania, along the shores of the Caspian Sea. After an interval of ten years, died B.C. 341. Johanan the high priest, and was succeeded by his son Jaddua. About three years after this event, the Persian monarch was poisoned, and the late king's youngest son, Arsaces, or Arses, was placed on the Persian throne; but, being also poisoned about three years afterwards, he was succeeded by the unfortunate Darius Codomannus. He had not long ascended the throne, before the infamous Bagoas, finding he was not one who would answer his purpose, resolved to remove him by the same means he had used to destroy his two predecessors. But Darius, being apprised of his design, made him drink the poisonous draught himself, and thereby became firmly settled in the kingdom, without farther difficulty.

At this eventful period, Alexander the Great, at the age of twenty, succeeded to the throne of Macedon, and caused himself to be appointed general of the Grecian forces against the Persians. With a comparatively small army he crossed the Hellespont, and passed into Asia; and having B.C. 334. defeated the immense army of Darius at the river Granicus, he speedily made himself master of all Asia Minor. The next year Darius advanced to meet him with an army of 600,000 men; but, near Issus, he was again utterly defeated by Alexander. The battle of Issus was followed by the reduction of all Syria and Phœnicia; and Alexander marched into Judea, to punish the Jews for granting the Tyrians supplies of provisions, and refusing them to him, during the siege of Tyre. While he was rapidly advancing to the metropolis, the high priest Jaddua, as well as the great body of the people, by sacrifices, oblations, and prayers, humbly besought God to avert the threatened danger. It being communicated to Jaddua in a dream, that he should go and meet the conqueror in his pontifical robes, at the head of all the priests in their proper habits, attended by a numerous body of the people dressed in white, he ordered the gates of the city to be thrown open, and marched in solemn procession to an eminence called Sapha, which commanded a prospect of the temple and of the whole city. As soon as the king approached the venerable pontiff, he was struck with profound awe at the spectacle, and hastening forward, saluted him with a religious veneration. While all stood amazed at this behaviour, Parmenio asked the reason of such unexpected homage; to which Alexander replied, that it was not offered to the priest, but to his God, in grateful acknowledgment for a vision with which he had been favoured at Dio, in Macedonia; in which this very person, and in this very habit, appeared to him, promising him the empire of Persia. Having kindly embraced Jaddua, he entered Jerusalem, and offered up sacrifices to God in the temple; where the high priest having shewn him the prophecies of Daniel, which predicted the overthrow of the Persian empire by a Grecian king, he went thence with greater assurance of success, not doubting but he was the person meant in the prophecies. At his departure, he granted the Jews the free exercise of their religion and laws, and exemption from the payment of tribute every seventh year. Egypt having quickly submitted to the conqueror, the following year he marched against Darius; and coming to a decisive battle at Arbela, he routed his immense army of about 1,100,000 men; and Darius being forced to fly for his life, was soon after assassinated by the treachery of Bessus. Having thus, according to the prophecies of Daniel, completely subverted the Persian empire, he rapidly extended his conquests from the Euphrates to the Indus, and from the Caspian Sea to the Southern Ocean. About six years afterwards, in the thirty-second year of his age, and the twelfth of his reign, he died at Babylon, either in consequence of excessive drinking, or from having been poisoned.

After the death of Alexander, his empire was divided among his four remaining generals. Cassander had Macedonia and Greece; Lysimachus had Thrace, Bithynia, &c.; Seleucus Nicator had Syria, Armenia, and other eastern countries; and Ptolemy Lagus had Egypt, Libya, &c. In the first partition of the empire, Palestine, with Cœle-Syria and Phœnicia, had been given to Laomedon, one of Alexander's generals; but having been deprived of the two latter by Ptolemy, the Jews, over whom Onias son of Jaddua was then high priest, refused to submit to this new master, from their religious sense of the oath of allegiance which they had taken. In consequence of this, Ptolemy marched into Judea, took Jerusalem, and carried 100,000 of them captive to Egypt; but there, considering their loyalty to their former conquerors, he used them so kindly, even promoting them to places of trust and power, that many followed them of their own accord. About six years afterwards, he was deprived of Judea, Cœle-Syria, and Phœnicia, by Antigonus; and having again made himself master of these provinces, he immediately afterwards lost them by the defeat of Cilles, one of his generals. They continued in the possession of Antigonus till his defeat and death at the battle of Ipsus, by the confederated forces of Ptolemy, Cassander, Lysimachus, and Seleucus; after which they were assigned to Ptolemy, along with Egypt, Libya, and Arabia. Some time after the recovery of Judea by Ptolemy, died Simon the Just, son of Onias, and high priest of the Jews, in the ninth year of his pontificate; and was succeeded by his brother Eleazar. He was distinguished for his wisdom and virtues; and is said to have completed the sacred canon of the Old Testament. Ptolemy Philadelphus having succeeded his father on the throne of Egypt, the Jews found in him as generous a protector as they had experienced in Ptolemy Soter. During his reign was made the important translation of the Old Testament into Greek, afterwards called the Septuagint version; which event has tended more to disseminate the knowledge, and confirm the authenticity of the sacred Scriptures, than any other which happened from the time of their completion to the commencement of the Christian æra. Antiochus Theos having succeeded his father Antiochus Soter, son of Seleucus, on the throne of Syria, maintained a long and sanguinary war with Ptolemy Philadelphus, which they at last agreed to terminate by a treaty of marriage; in which it was stipulated, that Antiochus was to divorce his wife Laodice, and marry Berenice, Ptolemy's daughter. But on the death of Philadelphus, about two years afterwards, Antiochus put away Berenice, and recalled Laodice; who, fearing another change, caused him to be poisoned, cut off Berenice, her son, and all her Egyptian attendants, and placed her own son Callinicus on the throne. Ptolemy Euergetes, who had succeeded his father on the throne of Egypt, in revenge for his sister's death, slew Laodice, and subdued all Syria and Cilicia. Callinicus, two years afterwards, in attempting to recover his dominions from Ptolemy, was overthrown in battle; but Ptolemy, hearing that his brother Antiochus was preparing to join Seleucus against him, came to an agreement with Callinicus; and peace was concluded between them for ten years. The Jews at this time were subject to Ptolemy, and Judea was taxed at the annual tribute of twenty talents. Not long after, Antiochus the Great, taking advantage of the accession of the profligate prince Ptolemy Philopater, seized upon Cœle-Syria. In the following year, Ptolemy forced Antiochus to retreat to Antioch. Ptolemy then made a progress through Syria; and coming to Jerusalem, he offered victims, and made many valuable presents to the temple. But having been hindered from entering the Holy of Holies by Simon the high priest, who had succeeded his father Onias II., Ptolemy departed to Egypt full of rage against the Jews; where he deprived them of the privileges they enjoyed, and acted with great cruelty towards them. Ptolemy, having made peace with Antiochus, died soon after, worn out by intemperance and debauchery, and was succeeded by his infant son Ptolemy Epiphanes. Antiochus thinking this a favourable opportunity, entered into a league with Philip, king of Macedon, to divide the dominions of the king of Egypt between them; and Antiochus having marched with an immense army into Cœle-Syria and Palestine, he speedily subdued those provinces. Soon afterwards, however, the Egyptians took advantage of Antiochus being engaged in war with Attalus, king of Pergamos, and sent Scopas with an army into Palestine and Cœle-Syria; where he was so successful, that he took several cities, reduced all Judea, and put a garrison in Jerusalem. But the following year Antiochus marched againstScopas, and soon rendered himself again master of all Cœle-Syria and Palestine. Among others, the Jews willingly submitted to him; and rendered him such essential services, that he gave orders that their city should be repaired, and that those who had been dispersed should return and inhabit it; and, among other important favours, confirmed them in all the privileges which had been granted by Alexander the Great. After this, being intent on his war with the Romans, he married his daughter Cleopatra to Ptolemy Epiphanes, and gave in dowry with her the provinces of Cœle-Syria and Palestine. But not long afterwards, Antiochus having attempted to seize upon Egypt, was totally defeated by the Romans, and condemned to pay 12,000 talents for defraying the expenses of the war. Covered with shame, he retired to Antioch; and being unable to raise the money which he had stipulated to pay the Romans, he marched into his eastern provinces to collect tribute, and amass what treasure he could; and attempting to rob the rich temple at Elymais, he was assaulted and slain by the inhabitants of the country.

Antiochus was succeeded on the Syrian throne by his son Seleucus Philopater, who was remarkable for little else than raising of taxes, to defray the tribute which the Romans had exacted from his father. Being informed that great treasures were deposited in the temple, he sent to seize them; but, when on the point of entering the sacred temple, the Syrians were struck with awe, and desisted. Soon afterwards, Seleucus was destroyed, and Antiochus, his brother, having heard of his death, and the attempt of Heliodorus, his murderer, to usurp the throne; and finding that there was another party forming for Ptolemy Philometor, king of Egypt, and that both of them were agreed "not to give unto him the honour of the kingdom," as the prophet Daniel had foretold; he applied to Eumenes, king of Pergamos, and Attalus his brother, and "by flattering speeches," and great promises of friendship, prevailed with them to help him against Heliodorus. Having by their means suppressed the usurper, he was quietly placed on the throne; and peaceably obtained the kingdom, as had been predicted in the same prophecy. Upon his accession to the throne he took the name of Epiphanes, or the Illustrious; but being in every respect "a vile person," as Daniel foretold of him, he was styled Epimanes, or the Madman. He was scarcely seated on the throne, when, being pressed by the Romans to raise their heavy tribute, among other means he deposed the good and pious high priest Onias, and sold the pontificate to his brother Jason for the yearly sum of 360 talents; and afterwards he deposed

B.C. 172. Jason, and sold it to his brother Menelaus for 660 talents. Incensed that the curators of young Ptolemy should have demanded for their master the provinces of Phœnicia, Cœle-Syria, and Palestine, which had been assigned for the dowry of Cleopatra, Antiochus marched towards the frontiers of Egypt, and meeting the forces of Ptolemy near Pelusium, they came to a battle, in which
B.C. 171. Antiochus obtained the victory. He afterwards routed the Egyptians, took Pelusium, ascended as far as Memphis, and made himself master of all Egypt, except Alexandria. The governor of Cyprus revolted from Ptolemy, and delivered up that important island to Antiochus; and the effeminate monarch of Egypt, having done little for the defence of himself and subjects, fell into the hands of the conqueror. While Antiochus was in Egypt, a false report having been spread of his death, Jason marched with a thousand men to recover the high priesthood, surprised the city of Jerusalem, drove Menelaus into the castle, and cruelly put to death all those whom he considered his adversaries. Antiochus being informed of these events, and supposing that the whole Jewish nation had revolted, hastened out of Egypt to quell the rebellion; and being told that the inhabitants of Jerusalem had made great rejoicings at the news of his death, he was so provoked, that having
B.C. 170. taken it by storm, he slew 40,000 persons, sold as many more for slaves, plundered the temple of gold and furniture to the amount of 800 talents of gold, entered the Holy of Holies, and sacrificed a sow upon the altar of burnt offerings, and caused the broth of it to be sprinkled all over the temple. He then returned to Antioch, laden with the spoils both of Egypt and Judea; appointing one Philip, a barbarous and cruel man, governor of Judea; and continuing Menelaus in the high priesthood.
B.C. 169. Antiochus hearing that the Alexandrians had made Physcon king in the stead of Philometor, under pretext of restoring the deposed king, made a third expedition into Egypt, and marched directly towards Alexandria to lay siege to the place. But finding that the civil war raging between the brothers would quickly render the country an easy prey to him, he seemingly again restored the kingdom to Philometor, excepting only Pelusium, and returned to Antioch. Suspecting his designs, however, Philometor and Physcon agreed to reign jointly in peace; which so enraged Antiochus, that he again invaded Egypt, ravaged and subdued it as far as Memphis, and advanced to besiege Alexandria. But Roman ambassadors charged him to withdraw his forces from Egypt, if he regarded the friendship of their state. Mad with rage at this dis-
B.C. 168. appointment, while marching back through Palestine, he detached from his army 20,000 men under the command of Apollonius, with orders to destroy Jerusalem, to put all the men to the sword, and to make slaves of the women and children. These orders were most rigorously put in execution on a sabbath day, when all the people were assembled at public worship, so that none escaped but such as could hide themselves in caves, or reach the mountains by flight. After having spoiled the city of all its riches, they set it on fire in several places, demolished the houses, and pulled down the walls round about it; and then, with the ruins, they built a strong fortress on Acra, an eminence which overlooked and commanded the temple. After the infuriated monarch had returned to Antioch, he issued a decree to oblige all people in his dominions to conform to the religion of the Greeks, and sent one Athenæus, a Grecian idolator, to initiate the Jews in the idolatrous rites, and to punish with the most cruel deaths those who refused. On his arrival at Jerusalem, assisted by the apostate Jews, he caused all sacrifices to the God of Israel to cease, suppressed all the observances of the Jewish religion, polluted the temple itself, and made it unfit for the worship of God, profaned their sabbaths and festivals, forbad their children to be circumcised, burned every copy of the law which could be found, dedicated the temple to Jupiter Olympius, erected his statue on the altar of burnt offerings, and put every one to death who was found to have acted contrary to what the king had decreed.

Mattathias, great-grandson of Asmonæus, from whom the family were called Asmonæans, retired with his five sons from the persecution at Jerusalem to his native place, in the tribe of Dan. Apelles, however, one of the king's officers, came to the place of their retreat, in order to enforce the execution of the king's commands; and having called the people together, he addressed himself to Mattathias, to persuade him to embrace idolatry, promising him great favour and riches. This the good priest not only scornfully rejected, but slew the first Jew who dared to approach the idolatrous altar; and then, turning upon the king's commissioner, he despatched him and all his attendants, with the assistance of his sons, and those that were with him; and putting himself at the head of his family, and as many Jews as he could collect, he broke down the idols and altars of the heathen, and retired into the mountains. Here being joined by numbers, who were strict adherents to the law of their God, and especially by those termed Asideans, and having thus gathered together such a company as made the appearance of a small army, he came out of his fastnesses and took the field; and marching round the cities of Judah, pulled down the heathen altars, restored circumcision, cut off all apostates, destroyed all persecutors wherever he came, and again re-established the true
B.C. 167. worship of God in all places where he prevailed. But Mattathias, worn out with old age and fatigue, died the next year; and his son Judas, surnamed Maccabæus, according to the appointment of his father, succeeded to the command of the army Judas, however, sufficiently compensated for the loss they had sustained by the death of the venerable priest; for having successively vanquished the various governors and commanders who appeared against him, he recovered the temple, repaired and purified it, restored the worship of God, appointed the feast of the dedication to be kept annually, and repaired Jerusalem, which had almost been reduced to a heap of

B. C. 165. ruins. Antiochus at this time was engaged in an expedition against the Persians, who, with the Armenians, had revolted from him; and when returning, having heard of the success of the Jews under Judas, and the defeat of his generals, he threatened utterly to destroy the whole nation, and make Jerusalem their common burial-place. But while these proud words were in his mouth, the judgments of God overtook him; for he was smitten with an incurable disease, being seized with grievous torments in his bowels, and a most intolerable ulcer, which
B. C. 164. terminated in his death. He was succeeded in the kingdom by his son Antiochus Eupator, a minor of nine years old, under the tuition of Lysias, the Syrian governor; who combined with the Idumeans and other neighbouring nations to destroy the whole race of Israel. Judas, informed of this, carried the war into the enemies' country; and for some years proved a terrible scourge to the Idumeans, Syrians, and Arabs, and other heathen nations, till he
B. C. 161. was slain by the general of Demetrius Soter. He was succeeded in the command by his orother Jonathan; who, with his brother Simon, continued to rectify with astonishing bravery and prudence the disorders both in church and state; and Onias the high priest having settled in Egypt, where he afterwards built a temple for the use of his countrymen, according to the form of that in Jerusalem, they officiated in Judea both as high priests and civil governors, during the reigns of Alexander Balas and Demetrius Nicator. Jonathan having been
B. C. 144. treacherously slain by the usurper Tryphon, and Simon, and his sons Judas and Mattathias murdered by Ptolemy his son-in-law, his son John Hyrcanus succeeded to the pontificate
B. C. 135. and government of Judea. He was at first constrained to make a disadvantageous peace with the Syrians; but on the accession of Demetrius Nicator, Hyrcanus shook off the Syrian yoke,

B. C. 70 scarcely dead before Aristobulus, joined by multitudes who hated the Pharisees, who had tyrannised during the preceding reign, contended for the crown and high priesthood against Hyrcanus, his elder but indolent brother, and succeeded in dispossessing him after a reign of only three months. Aretas, king of Arabia, having assisted Hyrcanus, besieged Aristobulus in the temple; but Aristobulus calling in the assistance of the Romans, he
B. C. 65. was obliged to withdraw his troops. Having however applied to Pompey, the Roman general, he decided for Hyrcanus, took Jerusalem, and seated him in the government, though he would not permit him to wear the diadem, and made
B. C. 63. Judea tributary to the Romans. Pompey, with several of his officers, also entered the Holy of Holies, after which he never prospered; and soon after Crassus pillaged the temple of

B. C. 47. and Hyrcanus continued in the high priesthood. After Antipater's death, his son, Herod the Great, by the assistance of Antony the Roman triumvir, and through much barbarity and bloodshed, obtained the regal
B. C. 40. dignity; which authority was at length con-
B. C. 30 firmed by Augustus Cæsar. He maintained his dignity with great ability but with the utmost cruelty in his own family as well as among others, till the birth of CHRIST. In the interval, he built many cities, and to ingratiate himself with the Jews, almost rebuilt the temple. His cruel attempt to murder the infant Saviour is recorded by the evangelist; and soon afterwards he died most miserably. After some years, during which the dominions of Herod were governed by his sons, Judea became a Roman province, and the sceptre departed from Judah, for Shiloh was come; and after being under the government of Roman procurators for some years, the whole Jewish state was at length subverted by Titus, the

It is therefore rightly placed opposite Tiberias, at the south-east end of the lake. PLINY says it was called Hippodion, was one of the cities of Decapolis, and had the river Hieromax, or Jarmouk, flowing before it. It was of heathen jurisdiction; whence perhaps it was destroyed by the Jews; but was rebuilt by Pompey, and joined to the province of Syria. Augustus afterwards gave it to Herod, on whose death it was again annexed to Syria. It is now called Om Keis: its ruins are in a very mutilated state, and when visited by BURCKHARDT it had not a single inhabitant. The remains of the sepulchral caverns in which the demoniacs abode are still to be seen. Ge. 10. 16; 15. 21. De. 7. 1. coming. Mar. 5. 2-5. Lu. 8. 27, 29. so. Ju. 5. 6.

In a parable, a resemblance in the principal incidents is all that is required; smaller matters being considered as a sort of drapery. MAIMONIDES, in Morch Nevochim, gives an excellent rule on this head: 'Fix it as a principle to attach yourself to the grand object of the parable, without attempting to make a particular application of all the circumstances and terms which it comprehends.' a sower. Mar. 4. 2-9. Herod's opinion of Christ, 1, 2. Wherefore John Baptist was beheaded, 3-12. Jesus departs into a desert place, 13, 14, where he feeds five thousand men with five loaves and two fishes, 15-21. He walks on the sea to his disciples, 22-33; and landing at Gennesaret, heals the sick by the touch of the hem of his garment, 34-36.

1 Herod. This was Herod Antipas, the son of Herod the Great, by Malthace, and tetrarch of Galilee and Perœa, which produced a revenue of 200 talents a year. He married the daughter of Aretas, king of Arabia, whom he divorced in order to marry Herodias, the wife of his brother Philip, who was still living. Aretas, to revenge the affront which Herod had offered his daughter, declared war against him, and vanquished him after an obstinate engagement. This defeat, JOSEPHUS assures us, the Jews considered as a punishment for the death of John the Baptist. Having gone to Rome to solicit the title of king, he was accused by Agrippa of carrying on a correspondence with Artabanus king of Parthia, against the Romans, and was banished by the emperor Caius to Lyons, and thence to Spain, where he and Herodias died in exile. Tradition,* in Latin traditio, from trado, I deliver, hand down, exactly agreeing with the original παράδοσις, from παραδίδωμι, I deliver, transmit. Among the Jews it signifies what is called the oral law, which they say has been successively handed down from Moses, through every generation, to Judah the Holy, who compiled and digested it into the Mishneh, to explain which the two Gemaras, or Talmuds, called the Jerusalem and Babylonish, were composed. Of the estimation in which these were held by the Jews, the following may serve as an example: 'The words of the Scribes are lovely beyond the words of the law, for the words of the law are weighty and light, but the words of the Scribes are all weighty.'

Ac. 10. 38. Cesarea Philippi. Cæsarea Philippi was anciently called Paneas, from the mountain of Panium, or Hermon, at the foot of which it was situated, near the springs of Jordan; but Philip the tetrarch, the son of Herod the Great, having rebuilt it, gave it the name of Cæsarea in honour of Tiberius, the reigning emperor, and he added his own name to it, to distinguish it from another Cæsarea on the coast of the Mediterranean. It was afterwards named Neronias by the young Agrippa, in honour of Nero; and, in the time of William of Tyre, it was called Belinas. It was, according to JOSEPHUS, a day's journey from Sidon, and 120 stadia from the lake of Phiala; and, according to ABULFEDA, a journey of a day and a half from Damascus. Many have confounded it with Dan, or Leshem; but EUSEBIUS and JEROME expressly affirm that Dan was four miles from Paneas, on the road to Tyre. It is now called Banias, and is described, by SEETZEN, as a hamlet of about twenty miserable huts, inhabited by Mohammedans; but BURCKHARDT says it contains about 150 houses, inhabited by Turks, Greeks, etc. Mar. 8. 27. Whom. Lu. 9. 18, etc. I the. ch. 8. 20; 9. 6; 12. 8, 32, 40; 13. 37, 41; 25. 31. 24 owed. Lu. 7. 41, 42; 13. 4, marg.; 16. 5, 7. ten thousand. Μυριων ταλαντων, a myriad of talents, the highest number known in Greek arithmetical notation. According to PRIDEAUX, the Roman talent was equal to 216*l.*; ten thousand of which would amount to 2,160,000*l.* If the Jewish talent of silver be designed, which is estimated by the same learned writer at 450*l.*, this sum amounts to 4,500,000*l.*; but if the gold talent is meant, which is equal to 7200*l.*, then the amount is 72,000,000*l.* This immense sum represents our boundless obligations to God, and our utter incapacity, as sinners infinitely indebted to Divine justice, of paying one mite out of the talent. 1 Ch. 29. 7. Ezr. 9. 6. Ps. 38. 4; 40. 12; 130. 3, 4. talents. 'A talent is 750 ounces of silver, which after five shillings the ounce is 187*l.* 10*s.*'

CHAP. XIX.

Christ heals the sick, 1, 2; answers the Pharisees concerning divorcement, 3-9; shews when marriage is necessary, 10-12; receives little children, 13-15; instructs the young man how to attain eternal life, 16-19; and how to be perfect, 20-22; tells his disciples how hard it is for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God, 23-26; and promises reward to those that forsake any thing to follow him, 27-30.

1 that when. Mar. 10. 1. Jno. 10. 40. he departed. This was our Lord's final departure from Galilee, previous to his crucifixion; but he appears to have taken in a large compass in his journey, and passed through the districts east of Jordan. Some learned men, however, are of opinion, that instead of 'beyond Jordan,' we should render, 'by the side of Jordan,' as περαν, especially with a genitive, sometimes signifies.

Bethany* was a village to the east of the mount of Olives, on the road to Jericho; fifteen stadia, (Jno. 11. 18) or nearly two miles, as JEROME states, from Jerusalem. This village is now small and poor, and the cultivation of the soil around it is much neglected; but it is a pleasant, romantic spot, shaded by the mount of Olives, and abounding in vines and long grass. It consists of from thirty to forty dwellings, inhabited by about 600 Mohammedans, for whose use there is a neat little mosque standing on an eminence. Here they shew the ruins of a sort of castle as the house of Lazarus, and a grotto as his tomb; and the house of Simon the leper, of Mary Magdalene and of Martha, and the identical tree which our Lord cursed, are among the monkish curiosities of the place. They held that 'wherever the money of any king is current, there the inhabitants acknowledge that king for their lord.' Now, by admitting that this was Cæsar's coin, and by consenting to receive it as the current coin of their country, they in fact acknowledged their subjection to his government, and of course their obligation to pay the tribute demanded of them. This answer was full of consummate wisdom, and it completely defeated the insidious designs of his enemies. He avoided rendering himself odious to the Jewish people by opposing their notions of liberty, or appearing to pay court to the emperor, without exposing himself to the charge of sedition and disaffection to the Roman government. and. ver. 37; ch. 4. 10. Pontius Pilate* governed Judea ten years under the emperor Tiberius, from his 13th to his 23rd year, A.D. 26 to 36; but, having exercised great cruelties against the Samaritans, they complained to Vitellius, governor of Syria, who sent Marcellus, one of his friends, to superintend Judea, and ordered Pilate to Rome, to give an account of his conduct to Tiberius. The emperor was dead before he arrived; but it is an ancient tradition, that he was banished to Vienne in Dauphiny, where he was reduced to such extremity that he killed himself with his own sword two years after.

6 It is not. ch. 33. 24. Lu. 6. 7-9. Jno. 18. 28. to put. De. 23. 18. Is. 61. 8. because. The Jews considered it was strictly forbidden by the Divine law to bring any filthy or iniquitous gain into the temple. For this reason they now refused to allow this money to be placed in the chest of the temple, amongst the former contributions for its repairs. In this they were right enough, but by the very act of refusing this money, they proved themselves to be gross perverters of the spirit of God's requirements: they saw not that it was much less lawful for them, who had hired Judas to this sordid action, to be employed in the service of the temple. Those that 'bear the vessels of the Lord,' ought to be holy. Thus our Lord's words, 'Ye blind guides! ye train at a gnat, and swallow a camel.'

9 Jeremy. The words here quoted are not found in Jeremiah, but in Zechariah; and a variety of conjectures have been formed, in order to reconcile this discrepancy. The most probable opinion seems to be, that the name of the prophet was originally omitted by the Evangelist, and that the name of Jeremiah was added by some subsequent copyist. It is omitted in two MSS. of the twelfth century, in the Syriac, later Persic, two of the Itala, and in some other Latin copies; and what renders it highly probable that the original reading was δια του προφητου, by the prophet, is, that St. Matthew frequently omits the name of the prophet in his quotations. See ch. 1. 22; 2. 5, 15; 13. 35; 21. 4. This omission is approved of by Bengel, Dr. A. Clarke, and Horne. And they. Zec. 11. 12, 13. thirty. ch. 26. 15. Ex. 21. 32. CHAP. XXVIII.

Christ's resurrection is declared by an angel to the women, 1-8. He himself appears unto them, 9, 10. The chief priests give the soldiers money to say that he was stolen out of his sepulchre, 11-15. Christ appears to his disciples, 16, 17, and sends them to baptize and teach all nations, 18-20.

1 the end. The Hebrew word Schabbath, from which our English word is derived, signifies rest, and is applied to all solemn festivals, equally with that one day of every week devoted to the worship of God; Eze. 20. 21, 'they polluted my sabbaths.' Three evangelists say, the transaction recorded in this verse, occurred upon the first day in the week, early in the morning, about sun-rising, and John says, while it was yet dark. Ὀψὲ σαββάτων, does not signify 'in the evening of the sabbath,' but 'sabbaths.' Hence, the great feast having been concluded, the term 'end of the sabbaths' denotes the time very clearly. Again, it may be observed that the Jews, speaking of their passover, sometimes speak according to their civil computation, wherein they measured their days from sun-rising to sun-rising. Sometimes according to their sacred computation, which was from sun-set to sun-set. This reconciles Nu. 28. 18, which seems to make the fourteenth day of the first month, the first day of unleavened bread. CONCLUDING REMARKS ON ST. MATTHEW'S GOSPEL.

MATTHEW being one of the twelve apostles, and early called to the apostleship, and from the time of his call a constant attendant on our Saviour, was perfectly well qualified to write fully the history of his life. He relates what he saw and heard. 'He is eminently distinguished for the distinctness and particularity with which he has related many of our Lord's discourses and moral instructions. Of these his sermon on the mount, his charge to the apostles, his illustrations of the nature of his kingdom, and his prophecy on mount Olivet, are examples. He has also wonderfully united simplicity and energy in relating the replies of his Master to the cavils of his adversaries.' 'There is not,' as Dr. A. CLARKE justly remarks, 'one truth or doctrine, in the whole oracles of God, which is not taught in this Evangelist. The outlines of the whole spiritual system are here correctly laid down: even Paul himself has added nothing: he has amplified and illustrated the truths contained in this Gospel;—under the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, neither he, nor any of the other apostles, have brought to light one truth, the prototype of which has not been found in the words and acts of our blessed Lord as related by MATTHEW.'

Mat. 14. 34,) where JOSEPHUS places a spring of excellent water called Capernaum. Dr. LIGHTFOOT places it between Tiberias and Tarichea, about two miles from the former; and Dr. RICHARDSON, in passing through the plain of Gennasereth, was told by the natives that the ruins of Capernaum were quite near. The Arab station and ruins mentioned by Mr. BUCKINGHAM, said to have been formerly called Capharnaoom, situated on the edge of the lake, from nine to twelve miles N.N.E. of Tiberias, bearing the name of Talhewn, or as BURCKHARDT writes it, Tel Houm, appear too far north for its site. he entered. ver. 39; ch. 6. 2. It was divided into Lower and Upper Galilee:—Upper Galilee, so called from its being mountainous, was termed Galilee of the Gentiles (Mat. 4. 15,) because inhabited, says STRABO, by Egyptians, Arabians, and Phœnicians, and comprehended the tribes of Asher and Naphtali;—the Lower Galilee contained the tribes of Zebulun and Issachar, and was sometimes termed the Great Field. It was, says JOSEPHUS, very populous and rich, containing 204 cities and towns. and cast. ch. 7. 30. Lu. 4. 41.

26 Abiathar. It appears from the passage referred to here, that Ahimelech was then high priest at Nob; and from other passages, that Abiathar was his son. Various conjectures have been formed in order to solve this difficulty; and some, instead of untying, have cut the knot, by pronouncing it an interpolation. The most probable opinion seems to be, that both father and son had two names, the father being also called Abiathar; and this appears almost certain from 2 Sa. 8. 17; 1 Ch. 18. 16, where Ahimelech seems evidently termed Abiathar, while Abiathar is called Ahimelech or Abimelech. (Compare 1 Ki. 2. 26, 27.) 1 Sa. 22. 20-22; 23. 6, 9. 2 Sa. 8. 17; 15. 24, 29, 35; 20. 25. 1 Ki. 1. 7; 2. 22, 26, 27; 4. 4. which is not lawful. Ex. 29. 32, 33. 2 out. Is. 65. 4. Lu. 8. 27. a man. St. Matthew gives a brief account of two demoniacs who were dispossessed on this occasion; but Mark and Luke omit the mention of one (who was perhaps not so remarkable). That these wretched men were not merely mad, as some suppose, but really possessed of evil spirits, appears clearly from the language employed, as well as from the narrative itself. St. Matthew expressly affirms that they were 'possessed with devils,' or demoniacs, δαιμονιζομενοι; St. Mark says he had 'an unclean spirit,' i. e. a fallen spirit; and St. Luke asserts, that he 'had devils (or demons) a long time,' and was called Legion, 'because many devils were entered into him.' With supernatural strength the demons burst asunder the chains and fetters with which he was bound; they address Christ as the 'Son of the most high God;' they beseech him to suffer them to enter into the swine; and when he had given them leave, they 'went out and entered into the swine,' etc. with. ver. 8; ch. 1. 23, 26; 3. 30; 7. 25. Σπεκουλατωρ, in Latin, speculator, from speculor, to look about, spy, properly denotes a sentinel; and as these sentinels kept guard at the palaces of kings, and the residences of Roman governors, so they were employed in other offices besides guarding, and usually performed that of executioners. As, however, we learn from JOSEPHUS, that Herod was at this very time engaged in war with Aretas, king of Arabia, in consequence of Herod's having divorced his daughter in order to marry Herodias, his brother Philip's wife; and as this event occurred at an entertainment given at the castle of Machærus, while his army was on its march against his father-in-law; we are furnished with an additional reason why a speculator, or sentinel, should have been employed as an executioner; and are thus enabled to discover such a latent and undesigned coincidence as clearly evinces the truth of the evangelical narrative.

Some learned men, however, are of opinion that the Bethsaida mentioned in the gospels was a different place; and that it was situated on the western shore of the sea of Tiberias, in Galilee, near Chorazin and Capernaum, with which it is associated, (Mat. 11. 21, 23. Jno. 12. 21;) and Bishop POCOCKE mentions the ruins of a town or large village in the plain of Huttin, about two miles west of the lake, still bearing the name of Baitsida, which he thinks occupies its site. ch. 8. 22. As the ears of the deaf appear closed, he applies his fingers to intimate that he would open them; and as the tongue of the dumb seems to be tied, or to cleave to the palate, he touches it, to intimate he would give loose and free motion to it. He accommodated himself to the weakness of those who might not indeed doubt his power, but fancy some external sign was requisite to healing. It was also thus made manifest, that this salutiferous power came from Himself, and that He who by one word, εφφαθα, had healed the man, must be Divine.

CHAP. VIII.

Christ feeds the people miraculously, 1-9; refuses to give a sign to the Pharisees, 10-13; admonishes his disciples to beware of the leaven of the Pharisees, and of the leaven of Herod, 14-21; gives a blind man his sight, 22-26; acknowledges that he is the Christ who should suffer and rise again, 27-33; and exhorts to patience in persecution for the profession of the gospel, 34-38.

13 seeing. Mat. 21. 19. Lu. 13. 6-9. a fig-tree. The fig-tree, συκη, is a genus of the polygamia triœcia class of plants, seldom rising above twelve feet, but sending off from the bottom many spreading branches. The leaves are of a dark green colour, nearly a span long, smooth, and irregularly divided into from three to five deep rounded lobes; and the fruit grows on short and thick stalks, of a purplish colour, and contains a soft, sweet, and fragrant pulp, intermixed with numerous small seeds. haply. Ru. 2. 3. 1 Sa. 6. 9. Lu. 10. 31; 12. 6, 7. he found. Is. 5. 7. for. Dr. Campbell observes, that the declaration, 'for the time of [ripe, Ed.] figs was not yet,' is not the reason why our Lord did not find any fruit on the tree, because the fig is of that class of vegetables in which the fruit is formed in its immature state before the leaves are seen. But as the fruit is of a pulpy nature, the broad, thick leaves come out in profusion to protect it from the rays of the sun during the time it is ripening. If the words, 'for the time,' etc. however, are read as a parenthesis, they then become a reason why Jesus Christ should look for fruit, because the season for gathering not having fully come, it would remove all suspicion that the fruit had been gathered: while the presence of the leaves incontestably proved the advance of the tree to the state in which fruit is found.

20 they saw. St. Matthew informs us that this tree grew by the way-side, and was therefore not private, but public property; so that the destruction of it really injured no one. Our Lord was pleased to make use of this miracle to prefigure the speedy ruin of the Jewish nation, on account of its unfruitfulness under greater advantages than any other people enjoyed at that day; and, like all the rest of his miracles, it was done with a gracious intention, to alarm his countrymen, and induce them to repent. 8 hath done. 'It appears to me more probable,' says Dr. DODDRIDGE, 'that Matthew and Mark should have introduced this story out of its place—that Lazarus, if he made this feast (which is not expressly said by John,) should have made use of Simon's house, as more convenient—and that Mary should have poured this ointment on Christ's head and body, as well as on his feet,—than that, within the compass of four days, Christ should have been twice anointed with so costly a perfume; and that the same fault should be found with the action, and the same value set upon the ointment, and the same words used in defence of the woman, and all this in the presence of many of the same persons; all which improbable particulars must be admitted, if the stories be considered as different.' The rebuke which Judas received from Christ at this unction determined him in his resolution to betray his Master; and therefore Christ's rebuke, and Judas's revenge, are united, as cause and effect, by Matthew and Mark. 1 Ch. 28. 2, 3; 29. 1-17. 2 Ch. 31. 20, 21; 34. 19-33. From various examples produced by LIGHTFOOT, and SCHOETGEN, it appears that the Galileans used a very corrupt dialect and pronunciation; interchanging the gutturals, and other letters, and so blending or dividing words as to render them unintelligible, or convey a contrary sense. Thus when a Galilean would have asked, אמר למאן, 'whose is this lamb,' he pronounced the first word so confusedly that it could not be known whether he meant חמר, chamor, 'an ass,' חמר, chamar, 'wine,' עמר, amar, 'wool,' or עימר, immar, 'a lamb.' A certain woman intending to say to a judge, 'My lord, I had a picture which they stole; and it was so great, that if you had been placed in it, your feet would not have touched the ground,' so spoiled it by her pronunciation, that her words meant, 'Sir slave, I had a beam, and they stole thee away; and it was so great, that if they had hung thee on it, thy feet would not have touched the ground.'

39 the centurion. The centurion was a military captain, and commander of a century, or 100 men. In order to have a proper notion of his office, it may be desirable to explain the construction and array of the Roman legion. Each legion was divided into ten cohorts, each cohort into three maniples, and each maniple into two centuries; so that there were thirty maniples, and sixty centuries in a legion, which, if the century had always, as the word imports, consisted of 100 soldiers, would have formed a combined phalanx of 6000 men. The number in a legion, however, varied at different periods; in the time of POLYBIUS it was 4200. The order of battle was that of three lines; the hastati, or spearmen, occupied the front; the principes, the second line; the triarii, (also called pilani, from their weapon, the pilum,) the third. The centurions were appointed by the tribunes, and generally selected from the common soldiers according to their merit; although the office was sometimes obtained for money, or through the favour of the consuls. Their badge was a vine rod, or sapling. ver. 44. Mat. 8. 5-10. Ac. 10. 1; 27. 1-3, 43. he said. Mat. 27. 43, 54. Lu. 23. 47, 48.

CHAP. XVI.

An angel declares the resurrection of Christ to three women, 1-8. Christ himself appears to Mary Magdalene, 9-11; to two going into the country, 12, 13; then to the apostles, 14; whom he sends forth to preach the gospel, 15-18; and ascends into heaven, 19, 20.

2 Mr. WEST supposes that the women made two different visits to the sepulchre, and, in consequence of that, two distinct reports to the disciples; that Mary Magdalene, with the other Mary and Salome, set out not only early, but very early in the morning, λιαν πρωι, i.e. before the time appointed to meet Joanna and the other women there. (Lu. 24. 10.) This interpretation, which is adopted by several eminent writers, is very probable, and reconciles the apparent discrepancy in the evangelists. Mat. 28. 1. Lu. 24. 1. Jno. 20. 1.

The latter sat in the porch of the tomb, and had assumed a terrible appearance to overawe the guard. (Mat. 28. 1-; but this appeared as a young man, within the sepulchre, in the inner apartment. The two angels spoken of by St. John (ch. 20. 11) appeared some time after these; but whether they were the same or different cannot be ascertained; nor whether the angels which manifested themselves to the second party of women, recorded by St. Luke, (ch. 24. 4,) were the same or different. Jno. 6. 42. which. The real father of Joseph was Jacob (Mat. 1. 16); but having married the daughter of Heli, and being perhaps adopted by him, he was called his son, and as such was entered in the public registers; Mary not being mentioned, because the Hebrews never permitted the name of a woman to enter their genealogical tables, but inserted her husband as the son of him who was, in reality, but his father-in-law. Hence it appears that St. Matthew, who wrote principally for the Jews, traces the pedigree of Jesus Christ from Abraham, through whom the promise was given to the Jews, to David, and from David, through the line of Solomon, to Jacob the father of Joseph, the reputed or legal father of Christ; and that St. Luke, who wrote for the Gentiles, extends his genealogy upwards from Heli, the father of Mary, through the line of Nathan, to David, and from David to Abraham, and from Abraham to Adam, who was the immediate 'son of God' by creation, and to whom the promise of the Saviour was given in behalf of himself and all his posterity. The two branches of descent from David, by Solomon and Nathan, being thus united in the persons of Mary and Joseph, Jesus the son of Mary re-united in himself all the blood, privileges, and rights, of the whole family of David; in consequence of which he is emphatically called 'the Son of David.'

(See on Ge. 11. 12.) It may here be remarked, that though some of the same names occur here, from Nathan downwards, as in Joseph's genealogy, yet there appears no sufficient evidence that the same persons were intended, different persons often bearing the same name. Sem. Ge. 5. 32; 7. 13; 9. 18, 26, 27; 10. 21, 22; 11. 10, etc. 1 Ch. 1. 17, Shem. Noe. ch. 27. 17. Sarepta,* a city of Phœnicia, on the coast of the Mediterranean, is called Zarphand by the Arabian geographer SHERIF IBN IDRIS, who places it twenty miles N. of Tyre, and ten S. of Sidon; but its real distance from Tyre is about fifteen miles, the whole distance from that city to Sidon being only twenty-five miles. MAUNDRELL states that the place shewn him for this city, called Sarphan, consisted of only a few houses, on the tops of the mountains, within about half a mile of the sea; between which there were ruins of considerable extent.

CHAP. VII.

Christ finds a greater faith in the centurion, a Gentile, than in any of the Jews, 1-9; heals his servant, being absent, 10; raises from death the widow's son at Nain, 11-17; answers John's messengers with the declaration of his miracles, 18-23; testifies to the people what opinion he held of John, 24-30; inveighs against the Jews, who with neither the manners of John nor of Jesus could be won, 31-35; and suffering his feet to be washed and anointed by a woman who was a sinner, he shews how he is a friend to sinners, to forgive them their sins, upon their repentance, 36-50.

But there is no indication in the gospel history, that Mary Magdalene was the sister of Lazarus; but on the contrary, it would appear that they were perfectly distinct persons, the sister of Lazarus residing at Bethany, while Mary Magdalene appears to have resided at Magdala, east of Jordan, a distance of nearly ninety miles. Add to this, that our Saviour seems to have been now in or near Nain, not at Bethany; and the woman appears from the recital to have been previously unknown to him.

Mar. 6. 14-28. Tetrarch. A tetrarch, τετραρχης, from τετρας, four, and αρχη, government, properly signifies a prince, or ruler over a quarter of any region; and had its origin from Galatia, which was governed by four princes. In the New Testament, however, it denotes a prince, or king, who reigns over the fourth part of a former kingdom. By Herod's will his kingdom was thus divided among his sons: Archelaus had one-half, consisting of Idumea, Judea, and Samaria; Herod Antipas, one-fourth, consisting of Galilee and Perea; and Philip the remaining fourth, consisting of Batanea, Trachonitis, and Auranitis. he. ch. 21. 25. CHAP. X.

Christ sends out at once seventy disciples to work miracles, and to preach, 1-12; pronounces a woe against certain cities, 13-16. The seventy return with joy; he shews them wherein to rejoice, and thanks his Father for his grace, 17-22; magnifies the happy estate of his church, 23, 24; teaches the lawyer how to attain eternal life, and to take every one for his neighbour that needs his mercy, 25-37; reprehends Martha, and commends Mary her sister, 38-42.

1 these. Mat. 10. 1, etc. Mar. 6, 7, etc. other seventy. Rather, seventy others, as Dr. CAMPBELL renders; for the expression other seventy implies that there were seventy sent before, which was not the case: it seems to refer to the twelve apostles whom our Lord had previously chosen. CHAP. XI.

Christ teaches to pray, and that instantly, 1-10; assuring us that God will give all good things to them that ask him, 11-13. He, casting out a dumb devil, rebukes the blasphemous Pharisees, 14-26; and shews who are blessed, 27, 28; preaches to the people, 29-36; and reprehends the outward shew of holiness in the Pharisees, scribes, and lawyers, 37-54.

20 the finger. Ex. 8. 19. Mat. 12. 28. the kingdom. For the destruction of the kingdom of Satan plainly implies the setting up of the kingdom of God. The reasoning of the Pharisees (ver. 17, and Mat. 12. 24, 25,) was not expressed, and Jesus, knowing their thoughts, gave ample proof of his omniscience. This, with our Lord's masterly confutation of their reasonings, by a conclusion drawn from their own premises, one would have supposed might have humbled and convinced those men; but the most conclusive reasoning, and the most astonishing miracles, were lost upon a people who were obstinately determined to disbelieve every thing that was good relative to Jesus of Nazareth. ch. 10. 9, 11. CHAP. XIII.

Christ preaches repentance upon the punishment of the Galileans, and others, 1-5. The fruitless fig-tree may not stand, 6-9. He heals the crooked woman, 10-17; shews the powerful working of the word in the hearts of his chosen, by the parable of the grain of mustard seed, and of leaven, 18-21; exhorts to enter in at the strait gate, 23-30; and reproves Herod and Jerusalem, 31-35.

1 the Galileans. The Galileans are frequently mentioned by JOSEPHUS as the most turbulent and seditious people, being upon all occasions ready to disturb the Roman authority. It is uncertain to what event our Lord refers; but it is probable that they were the followers of Judas Gaulonitis, who opposed paying tribute to Cæsar and submitting to the Roman government. A party of them coming to Jerusalem during one of the great festivals, and presenting their oblations in the court of the temple, Pilate treacherously sent a company of soldiers, who slew them, and 'mingled their blood with their sacrifices.' 8 When. That there were among the Jews of these times many disputes about seats at banquets, we learn both from JOSEPHUS and the Rabbins; nor were these matters unattended to by the Greeks and Romans. Similar admonitions to this of our Lord, also occur in the Rabbinical writers. Rabbi AKIBA said, Go two or three seats lower than the place that belongs to thee, and sit there till they say unto thee, Go up higher; but do not take the uppermost seat, lest they say unto thee, Come down: for it is better they should say unto thee, Go up, go up, than they should say, Go down, go down. 'They who lose their lives for the sake of God, live unto God, as do Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and the rest of the patriarchs.' Not less remarkable is a passage in Shemoth Rabba, 'Why doth Moses say, 'Ex. 32. 13) Remember Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob? R. Abin saith, The Lord said unto Moses, I look for ten men from thee, as I looked for that number in Sodom. Find me out ten righteous persons among the people, and I will not destroy thy people. Then saith Moses, Behold, here am I, and Aaron, Eleazer, and Ithamar, Phinehas, and Caleb, and Joshua; but, saith God, there are but seven: where are the other three? When Moses knew not what to do, he saith, O Eternal God, דיים הם המתים, do those live who are dead? Yes, saith God. Then saith Moses, If those that are dead do live, remember Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.' Ge. 17. 7; 28. 13, 21; 32. 9. Mat. 22. 3-33. Mar. 12. 26, 27.

21 flee. Accordingly, when Cestius Gallus came against Jerusalem, and unexpectedly raised the siege, JOSEPHUS states, that many of the noble Jews departed out of the city, as out of a sinking ship; and when Vespasian afterwards drew towards it, a great multitude fled to the mountains. And we learn from EUSEBIUS, and EPIPHANIUS, that at this juncture, all who believed in Christ left Jerusalem, and removed to Pella, and other places beyond Jordan; and so escaped the general shipwreck of their country, that we do not read of one who perished in Jerusalem. ch. 17. 31-33. 54 took. Our blessed Lord before his death passed another examination. One was before the Jewish Sanhedrim, whose proper province it was to try such as were accused as false prophets or blasphemers. This was a kind of ecclesiastical court. The other, with which the next chapter opens, was before Pilate, the Roman governor of Judea at that time; he principally took cognizance of criminal things, such especially as concerned the peace of the country, considered as part of the Roman empire. 58 another. A maid challenged Peter in the second instance, according to Matthew and Mark; yet here it is said ετερος, another (man) and he also answers to a man. But ετερος, as WETSTEIN shews, may be, and is in innumerable instances applied to a female; and Matthew says, 'she said to them that were there,' and Mark, 'she began to say to them that stood by.' So that the maid gave the information to those around her, and some man charged Peter with it. Probably several joined in the accusation, though he answered to an individual, for St. John says, 'They said unto him,' etc. Mat. 26. 71, 72. Mar. 14. 69, 70. Jno. 18. 25.

29 the days. Our Lord here refers to the destruction of Jerusalem, and the final desolation of the Jewish state; an evil associated with so many miseries, that sterility, which had otherwise been considered an opprobrium, was accounted a circumstance most felicitous. No history can furnish us with a parallel to the calamities and miseries of the Jews; rapine and murder, famine and pestilence, within; fire and sword, and all the terrors of war, without. Our Saviour himself wept at the foresight of these calamities; and it is almost impossible for persons of any humanity to read the relation of them in JOSEPHUS without weeping also. He might justly affirm, 'if the misfortunes of all, from the beginning of the world, were compared with those of the Jews, they would appear much inferior in the comparison.' ch. 21. 23, 24. CHAP. XXIV.

Christ's resurrection is declared by two angels to the women that come to the sepulchre, 1-8. These report it to others, 9-12. Christ himself appears to the two disciples that went to Emmaus, 13-35; afterwards he appears to the apostles, and reproves their unbelief, 36-46; gives them a charge, 47, 48; promises the Holy Ghost, 49; and so ascends into heaven, 50-53.

13 two. ver. 18. Mar. 16. 12, 13. Emmaus. Emmaus was situated, according to the testimony both of St. Luke and JOSEPHUS, sixty furlongs from Jerusalem, that is, about seven miles and a half. It has generally been confounded with Emmaus, a city of Judah, afterwards called Nicopolis; but RELAND has satisfactorily shewn that they were distinct places; the latter, according to the old Itinerary of Palestine, being situated 10 miles from Lydda, and 22 miles from Jerusalem. D'ARVIEUX states, that going from Jerusalem to Rama, he took the right from the high road to Rama, at some little distance from Jerusalem, and 'travelled a good league over rocks and flint stones, to the end of the valley of terebinthine trees,' until he reached Emmaus; which 'seems, by the ruins which surround it, to have been formerly larger that it was in our Saviour's time. The Christians, while masters of the Holy Land, re-established it a little, and built several churches. Emmaus was not worth the trouble of having come out of the way to see it.'

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON ST. LUKE'S GOSPEL.

LUKE, to whom this Gospel has been uniformly attributed from the earliest ages of the Christian church, is generally allowed to have been 'the beloved physician' mentioned by St. Paul, (Col. iv. 14;) and as he was the companion of that apostle, in all his labours and sufferings, for many years, (Ac. xvi. 12; xx. 1-6; xxvii. 1, 2; xxviii. 13-16. 2 Ti. iv. 11. Philem. 24,) and wrote 'the Acts of the Apostles,' which conclude with a brief account of St. Paul's imprisonment at Rome, we may be assured that he had the Apostle's sanction to what he did; and probably this Gospel was written some time before that event, about A.D. 63 or 64, as is generally supposed. He would appear, from Col. iv. 10, 11, and his intimate acquaintance with the Greek language, as well as from his Greek name Λουκας, to have been of Gentile extraction; and according to EUSEBIUS and others, he was a native of Antioch. But, from the Hebraisms occurring in his writings, and especially from his accurate knowledge of the Jewish rites, ceremonies, and customs, it is highly probable that he was a Jewish proselyte, and afterwards converted to Christianity. Though he may not have been, as some have affirmed, one of the seventy disciples, and an eye-witness of our Saviour's miracles, yet his intercourse with the apostles, and those who were eye-witnesses of the works and ear-witnesses of the words of Christ, renders him an unexceptionable witness, if considered merely as an historian; and the early and unanimous reception of his Gospel as divinely inspired is sufficient to satisfy every reasonable person.

6 Jacob's well. Over Jacob's well the empress Helena is said to have built a church, in the form of a cross, of which 'nothing but a few foundations' remained in the time of MAUNDRELL. He states that it is situated about one-third of an hour, or, about a mile, east of Naplosa, the ancient Sychar; and Mr. BUCKINGHAM says it is called Beer Samaresa, or the well of Samaria, and 'stands at the commencement of the round vale which is thought to be the parcel of ground bought by Jacob, and which, like the narrow valley east of Nablous, is rich and fertile. The mouth of the well itself had an arched or vaulted building over it; and the only passage down to it at this moment is by a small hole in the roof.' 'It is,' says MAUNDRELL, 'dug in the firm rock, and contains about three yards in diameter, and thirty-five in depth; five of which we found full of water,' being. Mat. 4. 2; 8. 24. From their appearance, and the number of them, it was quite evident that a practice of keeping water in large pots, each holding from eighteen to twenty-seven gallons, was once common in the country.' CHAP. V.

Jesus on the sabbath day cures him that was diseased eight and thirty years, 1-9. The Jews therefore cavil, and persecute him for it, 10-16. He answers for himself, and reproves them, shewing by the testimony of his Father, 17-30, of John, 31-35, of his works, 36-38, and of the scriptures, who he is, 39-47.

MAUNDRELL states, that 'it is 120 paces long, and forty broad, and at least eight deep, but void of water. At its west end it discovers some old arches, now dammed up. These some will have to be the porches, in which sat that multitude of lame, halt, and blind. But it is not likely, for instead of five, there are but three.'

4 whosoever. The sanative property of this pool has been supposed by some to have been communicated by the blood of the sacrifices, and others have referred it to the mineral properties of the waters. But, 1. The beasts for sacrifice were not washed here, but in a laver in the temple. 2. No natural property could cure all manner of diseases. 3. The cure only extended to the first who entered. 4. It took place only at one particular time. 5. As the healing was effected by immersion, it must have been instantaneous; and it was never failing in its effects. All which, not being observed in medicinal waters, determine the cures to have been miraculous, as expressly stated in the text. first. Ps. 119. 60. Pr. 6. 4; 8. 17. Ec. 9. 10. Ho. 13. 13. Re. 1. 11, 17, 18; 2. 8. I am. That our Lord by this expression asserted his divinity and eternal existence, as the great I AM, appears evident from the use of the present tense, instead of the preter, from its being in answer to the Jews, who enquired whether he had seen Abraham, and from its being thus understood by the multitude, who were exasperated at it to such a degree that they took up stones to stone him. The ancient Jews not only believed that the Messiah was superior to and Lord of all the patriarchs, and even of angels, but that his celestial nature existed with God from whom it emanated, before the creation, and that the creation was effected by his ministry. Re. 21. 23. I am. Our Lord here claims one of the titles given by the Jews to the Divine Being. So in Bammidbar Rabba, § 15, fol. 229. 1, 'The Israelites said to God, O Lord of the universe, thou commandest us to light lamps to thee, yet thou art the light of the world.' It was also a title of the Messiah (see Isa. 49. 6; 60. 1,); and in a remarkable passage of Yalkut Rubeni, fol. 6, it is said on Ge. 1. 4, 'From this we learn, that the holy and blessed God saw the light of the Messiah, and his works, before the world was created; and reserved it for the Messiah, and his generation, under the throne of his glory. Satan said to the holy and blessed God, For whom dost thou reserve that light which is under the throne of thy glory? God answered, For him who shall subdue thee, and overwhelm thee with confusion. Satan rejoined, Lord of the universe, shew that person to me. God said, Come, and see him. When he saw him, he was greatly agitated, and fell upon his face, saying, Truly this is the Messiah, who shall cast me and idolaters into hell.'

32 Since. It is worthy of remark, that, from the foundation of the world, no person born blind had been restored to sight, even by surgical operation, till about the year 1728; when the celebrated Dr. Cheselden, by couching the eyes of a young man fourteen years of age, restored them to perfect vision. This was the effect of well-directed surgery; that performed by Christ was wholly a miracle, effected by the power of God. The simple means employed could have had no effect in this case, and were merely employed as symbols. the world Job 20. 4. Is. 64. 4. Lu. 1. 70. Re. 16. 18.

CHAP. XI.

Christ raises Lazarus, four days buried, 1-44. Many Jews believe, 45, 46. The high priests and Pharisees gather a council against Christ, 47, 48. Caiaphas prophesies, 49-53. Jesus hides himself, 54. At the passover they enquire after him, and lay wait for him, 55-57.

1 Now. The raising of Lazarus from the dead, being a work of Christ beyond measure great, the most stupendous of all he had hitherto performed, and beyond all others calculated to evince his Divine majesty, was therefore purposely recorded by the Evangelist John; while it was omitted by the other Evangelists, probably, as GROTIUS supposes, because they wrote their histories during the life of Lazarus, and they did not mention him for fear of exciting the malice of the Jews against him; as we find from ch. 12. 10, that they sought to put him to death, that our Lord might not have such a monument of his power and goodness remaining in the land. was sick. ver. 3, 6. In reply to sceptical objections, it is sufficient to observe, that he who could raise Lazarus from the dead, could, with a much less exertion of power, have so loosened or removed the bandages of his feet and legs as to have rendered it practicable for him to come forth. TITTMAN well observes, that Lazarus was restored not only to life, but also to health, as appears from the alacrity of his motion; and this would constitute a new miracle. ch. 20. 5, 7. Loose. ver. 39. Accordingly we find that a desert, or wilderness, extended from Jericho to Bethel (Jos. 16. 1), called the wilderness of Bethaven (Jos. 18. 12), in which Joshua and the Israelites slew the inhabitants of Ai. Spikenard* is a highly aromatic plant growing in India, whence was made a very valuable unguent or perfume, used at the ancient baths and feasts. It is identified by Sir W. JONES with the sumbul of the Persians and Arabs, and jatamansi of the Hindoos; and he considers it a species of the valerian, of the triandria monogynia class of plants. The root is from three to twelve inches long, fibrous, sending up above the earth between thirty and forty ears or spikes, from which it has its name; stem, lower part perennial, upper part herbaceous, sub erect, simple, from six to twelve inches long; leaves entire, smooth, fourfold, the inner radical pair petioled and cordate, the rest sessile and lanceolate; pericarp, a single seed crowned with a pappus. anointed. Mar. 14. 8. Ac. 2. 23; 3. 13-15; 7. 52; 13. 27-29. Take. Pilate neither did nor could say this seriously; for crucifixion was not a Jewish but a Roman mode of punishment. The cross was made of two beams, either crossing at the top, at right angles, like a T, or in the middle of their length, like an X; with a piece on the centre of the transverse beam for the accusation, and another piece projecting from the middle, on which the person sat. The cross on which our Lord suffered was of the former kind, being thus represented on all old monuments, coins, and crosses. The body was usually fastened to the upright beam by nailing the feet to it, and on the transverse piece by nailing the hands; and the person was frequently permitted to hang in this situation till he perished through agony and lack of food. This horrible punishment was usually inflicted only on slaves for the worst of crimes. ch. 18. 31. Mat. 27. 24.

CHAP. XX.

Mary comes to the sepulchre, 1, 2; so do Peter and John, ignorant of the resurrection, 3-10. Jesus appears to Mary Magdalene, 11-18, and to his disciples, 19-23. The incredulity and confession of Thomas, 24-29. The Scripture is sufficient to salvation, 30, 31.

1 first. ver. 19, 26. Ac. 20. 7. 1 Co. 16. 2. Re. 1. 10. cometh. Mary Magdalene, as well as Peter, was evidently at the sepulchre twice on the morning of the resurrection. The first time of her going was some short time before her companions, the other Mary and Salome (Mat. 28. 1); and observing that the stone had been removed, she returned to inform Peter and John. In the mean time, the other Mary and Salome came to the sepulchre, and saw the angel, as recorded by Matthew and Mark. While these women returned to the city, Peter and John went to the sepulchre, passing them at some distance, or going another way, followed by Mary Magdalene, who stayed after their return. This was her second journey; when she saw two angels, and then Jesus himself, as here related; and immediately after Jesus appeared to the other women, as they returned to the city (Mat. 28. 9, 10.) In the meantime Joanna and her company arrived at the sepulchre, when two angels appeared to them, and addressed them as the one angel had done the other women, (Lu. 24. 1-10.) They immediately returned to the city, and by some means found the apostles before the others arrived, and informed them of what they had seen; upon which Peter went a second time to the sepulchre, but saw only the linen clothes lying, (Lu. 24. 12.) 28 My Lord. The disbelief of the apostle is the means of furnishing us with a full and satisfactory demonstration of the resurrection of our Lord. Throughout the divine dispensations every doctrine and every important truth is gradually revealed; and here we have a conspicuous instance of this progressive system. An angel first declares the glorious event; the empty sepulchre confirms the women's report. Christ's appearance to Mary Magdalene shewed that he was alive; that to the disciples at Emmaus proved that it was at least the spirit of Christ; that to the eleven shewed the reality of his body; and the conviction given to St. Thomas proved it the self-same body that had been crucified. Incredulity itself is satisfied; and the convinced apostle exclaims, in the joy of his heart, 'My Lord and my God!' ver. 16, 31; ch. 5. 23; 9. 35-38. Ps. 45. 6, 11; 102. 24-28; 118. 24-28. But however strong and strange it may appear to us of the western world, we find sacred and other authors using hyperboles of the like kind and signification. See Nu. 13. 33. De. 1. 28. Ps. 4. 11. Ec. 47. 15. BASNAGE gives a very similar hyperbole taken from the Jewish writers, in which Jochanan is said to have 'composed such a great number of precepts and lessons, that if the heavens were paper, and all the children of men so many scribes, they would not suffice to write all his lessons.' CONCLUDING REMARKS ON ST. JOHN'S GOSPEL.

JOHN, who, according to the unanimous testimony of the ancient fathers and ecclesiastical writers, was the author of this Gospel, was the son of Zebedee, a fisherman of Bethsaida, by Salome his wife, (compare Mat. x. 2, with Mat. xxvii. 55, 56, and Mar. xv. 40,) and brother of James the elder, whom 'Herod killed with the sword.' (Ac. xii. 2.) THEOPHYLACT says that Salome was the daughter of Joseph, the husband of Mary, by a former wife; and that consequently she was our Lord's sister, and John was his nephew. He followed the occupation of his father till his call to the apostleship, (Mat. iv. 21, 22, Mar. i. 19, 20, Lu. v. 1-10,) which is supposed to have been when he was about twenty-five years of age; after which he was a constant eye-witness of our Lord's labours, journeyings, discourses, miracles, passion, crucifixion, resurrection, and ascension. After the ascension of our Lord he returned with the other apostles to Jerusalem, and with the rest partook of the outpouring of the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost, by which he was eminently qualified for the office of an Evangelist and Apostle. After the death of Mary the mother of Christ, which is supposed to have taken place about fifteen years after the crucifixion, and probably after the council held in Jerusalem about A.D. 49 or 50, (Ac. xv.,) at which he was present, he is said by ecclesiastical writers to have proceeded to Asia Minor, where he formed and presided over seven churches in as many cities, but chiefly resided at Ephesus. Thence he was banished by the emperor Domitian, in the fifteenth year of his reign, A.D. 95, to the isle of Patmos in the Ægean sea, where he wrote the Apocalypse, (Re. i. 9.) On the accession of Nerva the following year, he was recalled from exile, and returned to Ephesus, where he wrote his Gospel and Epistles, and died in the hundredth year of his age, about A.D. 100, and in the third year of the emperor Trajan. It is generally believed that St. John was the youngest of the twelve apostles, and that he survived all the rest. JEROME, in his comment on Gal. VI., says that he continued preaching when so enfeebled with age as to be obliged to be carried into the assembly: and that, not being able to deliver any long discourse, his custom was to say in every meeting, My dear children, love one another. The general current of ancient writers declares that the apostle wrote his Gospel at an advanced period of life, with which the internal evidence perfectly agrees: and we may safely refer it, with CHRYSOSTOM, EPIPHANIUS, MILL, LE CLERC, and others, to the year 97. The design of St. John in writing his Gospel is said by some to have been to supply those important events which the other Evangelists had omitted, and to refute the notions of the Cerinthians and Nicolaitans, or according to others, to refute the heresy of the Gnostics and Sabians. But, though many parts of his Gospel may be successfully quoted against the strange doctrines held by those sects, yet the apostle had evidently a more general end in view than the confutation of their heresies. His own words sufficiently inform us of his motive and design in writing this Gospel: 'These things are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing, ye might have life through his name.' (ch. xx. 31.) Learned men are not wholly agreed concerning the language in which this Gospel was originally written. SALMASIUS, GROTIUS, and other writers, have imagined that St. John wrote it in his own native tongue, the Aramean or Syriac, and that it was afterwards translated into Greek. This opinion is not supported by any strong arguments, and is contradicted by the unanimous voice of antiquity, which affirms that he wrote it in Greek, which is the general and most probable opinion. The style of this Gospel indicates a great want of those advantages which result from a learned education; but this defect is amply compensated by the unexampled simplicity with which he expresses the sublimest truths. One thing very remarkable is an attempt to impress important truths more strongly on the minds of his readers, by employing in the expression of them both an affirmative proposition and a negative. It is manifestly not without design that he commonly passes over those passages of our Lord's history and teaching which had been treated at large by the other Evangelists, or if he touches them at all, he touches them but slightly, whilst he records many miracles which had been overlooked by the rest, and expatiates on the sublime doctrines of the pre-existence, the divinity, and the incarnation of the WORD, the great ends of His mission, and the blessings of His purchase.

The ACTS of the APOSTLES.

CHAP. I.

Christ, preparing his apostles to the beholding of his ascension, gathers them together unto the mount Olivet, commands them to expect in Jerusalem the sending down of the Holy Ghost, promises after a few days to send it, and ascends into heaven in their sight, 1-9. After his ascension they are warned by two angels to depart, and to set their minds upon his second coming, 10, 11. They accordingly return, and, giving themselves to prayer, choose Matthias apostle in the place of Judas, 12-26.

CHAP. III.

Peter preaching to the people that came to see a lame man restored to his feet, 1-11, professes the cure not to have been wrought by his or John's own power or holiness, but by God, and his son Jesus, and through faith in his name, 12; withal representing them for crucifying Jesus, 13-16; which because they did it through ignorance, and that thereby were fulfilled God's determinate counsel, and the Scriptures, 17, 18, he exhorts them by repentance and faith to seek remission of their sins, and salvation in the same Jesus, 19-26.

CHAP. IV.

The rulers of the Jews, offended with Peter's sermon, 1, 2, imprison him and John, 3, 4. After, upon examination Peter boldly avoucheth the lame man to be healed by the name of Jesus, and that by the same Jesus only we must be eternally saved, 5-12, they command him and John to preach no more in that name, adding also threatening, 13-22; whereupon the church flees to prayer, 23-30. And God, by moving the place where they were assembled, testifies that he heard their prayer; confirming the church with the gift of the Holy Ghost, and with mutual love and charity, 31-37.

CHAP. VI.

The apostles, desirous to have the poor regarded for their bodily sustenance, as also careful themselves to dispense the word of God, the food of the soul, 1, 2, recommend, 3, 4, and with the church's consent ordain seven chosen men to the office of deaconship, 5, 6. The word of God prevails, 7. Stephen, full of faith and the Holy Ghost, confuting those with whom he disputed, is brought before the council, and falsely accused of blasphemy against the law and the temple, 8-15.

CHAP. VII.

Stephen, permitted to answer to the accusation of blasphemy, 1, shews that Abraham worshipped God rightly, and how God chose the fathers, 2-19, before Moses was born, and before the tabernacle and temple were built, 20-36; that Moses himself witnessed of Christ, 37-43; and that all outward ceremonies were ordained, according to the heavenly pattern, to last but for a time, 44-50; reprehending their rebellion, and murdering of Christ, the Just One, whom the prophets foretold should come into the world, 51-53. Whereupon they stone him to death, who commends his soul to Jesus, and humbly prays for them, 54-60.

16 were. Of the two burying-places of the patriarchs, one was at Hebron, the cave and field which Abraham purchased of Ephron the Hittite, (Ge. 23. 16, etc.); the other in Sychem, which Jacob (not Abraham) bought of the sons of Emmor, (Ge. 33. 19.) To remove this glaring discrepancy, MARKLAND interprets παρα, from, as it frequently signifies with a genitive, and renders, 'And were carried over to Sychem; and afterwards from among the descendants of Emmor, the father, or son, of Sychem, they were laid in the sepulchre which Abraham bought for a sum of money.' This agrees with the account which JOSEPHUS gives of the patriarchs; that they were carried out of Egypt, first to Sychem, and then to Hebron, where they were buried. Ex. 13. 19. CHAP. VIII.

By occasion of the persecution in Jerusalem, the church being planted in Samaria, by Philip the deacon, who preached, did miracles, and baptized many, 1-8; among the rest Simon the sorcerer, a great seducer of the people, 9-13; Peter and John come to confirm and enlarge the church; where, by prayer and imposition of hands giving the Holy Ghost, 14-17; when Simon would have bought the like power of them, Peter sharply reproving his hypocrisy and covetousness, and exhorting him to repentance, together with John preaching the word of the Lord, return to Jerusalem, 18-25; but the angel sends Philip to teach and baptize the Ethiopian eunuch, 26-40.

1 And Saul. This clause evidently belongs to the conclusion of the preceding chapter; there is scarcely a worse division of chapters than this. ch. 7. 58; 22. 20. there. ch. 5. 33, 40; 7. 54. CHAP. IX.

Saul, going towards Damascus, is stricken down to the earth, and led blind to Damascus, 1-9; is called to the apostleship, 10-17; and is baptized by Ananias, 18, 19. He preaches Christ boldly, 20-22. The Jews lay wait to kill him, 23-28; so do the Grecians, but he escapes both, 29, 30. The church having rest, Peter heals Eneas of the palsy, 31-35; and restores Tabitha to life, 36-43.

Clarke, 'The middle wall of partition is now pulled down; the Jews and Gentiles are called to become one flock, under one shepherd and bishop of souls. Thou, Peter, shalt open the door of faith to the Gentiles, and be also the minister of the circumcision. Rise up; already a blessed sacrifice is prepared: go and offer it to God; and let thy soul feed on the fruits of his mercy,' etc.

24 the morrow. ver. 9. Cesarea. This city, once an obscure fortress called Strato's Tower, was built and superbly decorated by Herod the Great and called Cæsarea, in honour of Augustus Cæsar, to whom he dedicated it in the 28th year of his reign. It was situated on the shore of the Mediterranean, between Joppa and Dora, with a haven, rendered by Herod the most convenient on the coast: according to Ibn Idris and Abulfeda, 30 miles from Jaffa or Joppa, 32 from Ramlay, and 36 from Acco, or Ptolemais; and, according to Josephus, 600 stadia, or 75 miles, from Jerusalem, though the real distance is probably not more than 62 miles. Nothing now remains of the former splendour of Cæsarea: the supposed sites of the ancient edifices are mere mounds of indefinable form; the waves wash the ruins of the mole, the tower, and the port; the whole of the surrounding country is a sandy desert; and not a creature except beasts of prey, resides within many miles of this silent desolation. and had. Is. 2. 3. CHAP. XII.

King Herod persecutes the Christians, kills James, and imprisons Peter; whom an angel delivers upon the prayers of the church, 1-19. Herod in his pride taking to himself the honour due to God, is stricken by an angel, and dies miserably, 20-23. After his death, the word of God prospers, 24. Saul and Barnabas return to Antioch, 25.

CHAP. XXI.

Paul calls at the house of Philip, whose daughters prophesy, 1-9. Agabus, foretelling what should befal him at Jerusalem, he will not be dissuaded from going thither, 10-16. He comes to Jerusalem, 17-26; where he is apprehended, and in great danger, but by the chief captain is rescued, 27-36; and requests, and is permitted to speak to the people, 37-40.

1 we were. ch. 20. 37, 38. 1 Sa. 20. 41, 42. 1 Th. 2. 17. and had. ch. 27. 2, 4. Lu. 5. 4; 8. 22. Coos. Coos, Cos, or Co, now Zia, is an island in the Ægean sea, one of those called Cyclades, near the south-west point of Asia Minor, and about fifteen miles from Halicarnassus. Rhodes. Rhodes is a celebrated island in the same sea, southward of Caria, from which it is distant about twenty miles, next to Cyprus and Lesbos in extent, being 120 miles in circumference. It was remarkable for the clearness of the air, and its pleasant and healthy climate, and chiefly for its Colossus of brass, seventy cubits high, with each finger as large as an ordinary man, standing astride over the mouth of the harbour, so that ships in full sail passed between its legs.

6 that. It is evident that the apostle considered his extraordinary conversion as a most complete demonstration of the truth of Christianity; and when all the particulars of his education, his previous religious principles, his zeal, his enmity against Christians, and his prospects of secular honours and preferments by persecuting them, are compared with the subsequent part of his life, and the sudden transition from a furious persecutor to a zealous preacher of the gospel, in which he laboured and suffered to the end of his life, and for which he died a martyr, it must convince every candid and impartial person that no rational account can be given of this change, except what he himself assigns; and consequently, if that be true, that Christianity is Divine. that. ch. 9. 3-5; 26. 12. Damascus. Ge. 14. 15; 15. 2. 2 Sa. 8. 6. about. ch. 26. 13. 5 I wist. Soon after the holding of the first council at Jerusalem, Ananias, son of Nebedenus, was deprived of the high priest's office, for certain acts of violence, and sent to Rome, whence he was afterwards released, and returned to Jerusalem. Between the death of Jonathan, who succeeded him and was murdered by Felix, and the high priesthood of Ismael, who was invested with that office by Agrippa, an interval elapsed in which this dignity was vacant. This was the precise time when St. Paul was apprehended; and the Sanhedrin being destitute of a president, Ananias undertook to discharge the office. It is probable that Paul was ignorant of this circumstance. ch. 24. 17. Thou. Ex. 22. 28. Ec. 10. 20. 2 Pe. 2. 10. Jude 8, 9.

They therefore made no scruple of acquainting the chief priests and elders with their conspiracy against the life of Paul, and applying for their connivance and support; who, being chiefly of the sect of the Sadducees, and the apostle's bitterest enemies, were so far from blaming them for it, that they gladly aided and abetted them in this mode of dispatching him, and on its failure they soon afterwards determined upon making a similar attempt. (ch. 25. 2, 3.) If these were, in their bad way, conscientious men, they were under no necessity of perishing for hunger, when the providence of God had hindered them from accomplishing their vow; for their vows of abstinence from eating and drinking were as easy to loose as to bind, any of their wise men or Rabbies having power to absolve them, as Dr. LIGHTFOOT has shewn from the Talmud. 1 Sa. 14. 24, 27, 28, 40-44. CHAP. XXIV.

Paul being accused by Tertullus the orator, 1-9, answers for his life and doctrine, 10-23. He preaches Christ to the governor and his wife, 24, 25. The governor hopes for a bribe, but in vain, 26. At last, going out of his office, he leaves Paul in prison, 27.

2 Seeing. Felix, bad as he was, had certainly rendered some services to Judæa. He had entirely subdued a very formidable banditti which had infested the country, and sent their captain, Eliezar, to Rome; had suppressed the sedition raised by the Egyptian impostor (ch. 21. 38); and had quelled a very afflictive disturbance which took place between the Syrians and Jews of Cæsarea. But, though Tertullus might truly say, 'by thee we enjoy great quietness,' yet it is evident that he was guilty of the grossest flattery, as we have seen both from his own historians and JOSEPHUS, that he was both a bad man, and a bad governor. ver. 26, 27. The Jews accuse Paul before Festus, 1-7. He answers for himself, 8-10, and appeals unto Cesar, 11-13. Afterwards Festus opens his matter to king Agrippa, 14-22; and he is brought forth, 23, 24. Festus clears him of having done any thing worthy of death, 25-27.

1 into. ch. 23. 34. the province. By the province, Judea is meant; for after the death of Herod Agrippa, Claudius thought it imprudent to trust the government in the hands of his son Agrippa, who was then but seventeen years of age: and therefore, Cuspius Fadus was sent to be procurator. And when afterwards Claudius had given to Agrippa the tetrarchy of Philip, he nevertheless kept the province of Judea in his own hands, and governed it by procurators sent from Rome. he. ver. 5; ch. 18. 22; 21. 15.

The Julian law condemned those magistrates, and others, as violaters of the public peace, who had put to death, tortured, scourged, imprisoned, or condemned any Roman citizen who had appealed to Cesar. This law was so sacred and imperative, that, in the persecution under Trajan, PLINY would not attempt to put to death Roman citizens, who were proved to have turned Christians, but determined to send them to Rome, probably because they had appealed. ver. 10, 25; ch. 26. 32; 28. 19. 1 Sa. 27. 1.

24 King Agrippa. King Agrippa was the son of Herod Agrippa; who upon the death of his uncle Herod, king of Chalcis, A.D. 48, succeeded to his dominions, by the favour of the emperor Claudius. Four years afterwards, Claudius removed him from that kingdom to a larger one; giving him the tetrarchy of Philip, that of Lysanias, and the province which Varus governed. Nero afterwards added Julias in Perræa, Tarichæa, and Tiberias. Claudius gave him the power of appointing the high-priest among the Jews; and instances of his exercising this power may be seen in JOSEPHUS. He was strongly attached to the Romans, and did every thing in his power to prevent the Jews from rebelling; and when he could not prevail, he united his troops to those of Titus, and assisted at the siege of Jerusalem. After the ruin of his country, he retired with his sister Berenice to Rome where he died, aged 70, about A.D. 90. about. ver. 2, 3, 7. that he. ch. 22. 22. Lu. 23. 21-23.

27 the fourteenth. ver. 18-20. Adria. Adria, strictly speaking, was the name of the Adriatic gulf, now the Gulf of Venice, an arm of the Mediterranean, about 400 miles long and 140 broad, stretching along the eastern shores of Italy on one side, and Dalmatia, Sclavonia, and Macedonia on the other. But the term Adria was extended far beyond the limits of this gulf, and appears to have been given to an indeterminate extent of sea, as we say, generally, the Levant. It is observable, that the sacred historian does not say 'in the Adriatic gulf,' but 'in Adria,' (that is, the Adriatic sea, πελαγος being understood;) which, says HESYCHIUS, was the same as the Ionian sea; and STRABO says that the Ionian gulf 'is a part of that now called the Adriatic.' But not only the Ionian, but even the Sicilian sea, and part of that which washes Crete, were called the Adriatic. Thus the scholiast on DIONYSIUS PERIEGETIS says, 'they call this Sicilian sea Adria.' And PTOLEMY says that Sicily was bounded on the east by the Adriatic, υπο Αδριοι, and that Crete was bounded on the west by the Adriatic sea, υπο του Αδριατικου πελαγος. the shipmen. ver. 30. 1 Ki. 9. 27. Melita,* now Malta, the island on which Paul and his companions were cast, is situate in the Mediterranean sea, about fifty miles from the coast of Sicily, towards Africa; and is one immense rock of soft white free-stone, twenty miles long, twelve in its greatest breadth, and sixty in circumference. Some, however, with the learned JACOB BRYANT, are of opinion that this island was Melita in the Adriatic gulf, near Illyricum; but it may be sufficient to observe, that the course of the Alexandrian ship, first to Syracuse and then to Rhegium, proves that it was the present Malta, as the proper course from the Illyrian Melita would have been first to Rhegium, before it reached Syracuse, to which indeed it need not have gone at all.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

THE Acts of the Apostles is a most valuable portion of Divine revelation; and, independently of its universal reception in the Christian church, as an authentic and inspired production, it bears the most satisfactory internal evidence of its authenticity and truth. St. Luke's long attendance upon St. Paul, and his having been an eye-witness of many of the facts which he has recorded, independently of his Divine inspiration, render him a most suitable and credible historian; and his medical knowledge, for he is allowed to have been a physician, enabled him both to form a proper judgment of the miraculous cures which were performed by St. Paul, and to give an authentic and circumstantial detail of them. The plainness and simplicity of the narrative are also strong circumstances in its favour. The history of the Acts is one of the most important parts of the Sacred History, for without it neither the Gospels nor Epistles could have been so clearly understood; but by the aid of it the whole scheme of the Christian revelation is set before us in a clear and easy view.

CHAP. VIII.

They that are in Christ, are free from condemnation, 1-4. What harm comes of the flesh, 5-12; and what good of the Spirit, 13-18. The glorious deliverance all things long for, 19-28, was beforehand decreed from God, 29-37. Nothing can sever us from his love, 38, 39.

CHAP. X.

The Scripture shews the difference between the righteousness of the law, and that of faith, 1-10; and that all, both Jew and Gentile, that believe, shall not be confounded, 11-17; and that the Gentiles shall receive the word and believe, 18. Israel was now ignorant of these things, 19-21.

CHAP. XII.

God's mercies must move us to please God, 1, 2. No man must think too well of himself, 3-5; but every one attend on that calling wherein he is placed, 6-8. Love, and many other duties, are required of us, 9-18. Revenge is specially forbidden, 19-21.

W. of Macedonia, on the eastern coast of the Adriatic gulf, opposite Italy. It was distinguished into two parts; Liburnia north, now Croatia; and Dalmatia south, still retaining the same name. The account of St. Paul's second visit to the peninsula of Greece, Ac. 20. 1, 2, says Dr. Paley, leads us to suppose that, in going over Macedonia, he had passed so far to the west, as to come into those parts of the country which were contiguous to Illyricum, if he did not enter Illyricum itself. The history and the Epistle therefore so far agree; and the agreement is much strengthened by a coincidence of time; for much before the time when this epistle was written, he could not have said so, as his route, in his former journey, confined him to the eastern side of the peninsula, a considerable distance from Illyricum. fully. ch. 1. 14-16. CHAP. XVI.

3 Greet. Had the notes of time in this epistle fixed the writing of it to any date prior to St. Paul's first residence at Corinth, the salutation of Aquila and Priscilla would have contradicted the history, because it would have been prior to his acquaintance with these persons. If they had fixed it during that residence at Corinth, during his journey to Jerusalem, or during his progress through Asia Minor, an equal contradiction would have been incurred because, during all that time, they were either with St. Paul, or abiding at Ephesus. Lastly, had they fixed this epistle to be either contemporary with the first epistle to the Corinthians, or prior to it, a similar contradiction would have ensued, for they were then with St. Paul. As it is, all things are consistent.—See Dr. Paley. Priscilla. Ac. 18. 2, etc.; 18. 26. 1 Co. 16. 19. 2 Ti. 4. 19. my. ver. 9. 1 Co. 16. 16.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE EPISTLE TO THE ROMANS.

The Epistle to the Romans is 'a writing,' says Dr. Macknight, 'which, for sublimity and truth of sentiment, for brevity and strength of expression, for regularity in its structure, but above all, for the unspeakable importance of the discoveries which it contains, stands unrivalled by any mere human composition, and as far exceeds the most celebrated productions of the learned Greeks and Romans, as the shining of the sun exceeds the twinkling of the stars.' 'The plan of it is very extensive; and it is surprising to see what a spacious field of knowledge is comprised, and how many various designs, arguments, explications, instructions, and exhortations, are executed in so small a compass.... The whole Epistle is to be taken in connection, or considered as one continued discourse; and the sense of every part must be taken from the drift of the whole. Every sentence, or verse, is not to be regarded as a distinct mathematical proposition, or theorem, or as a sentence in the book of Proverbs, whose sense is absolute, and independent of what goes before, or comes after: but we must remember, that every sentence, especially in the argumentative part, bears relation to, and is dependent upon, the whole discourse, and cannot be rightly understood unless we understand the scope and drift of the whole; and therefore, the whole Epistle, or at least the eleven first chapters of it, ought to be read over at once, without stopping. As to the use and excellency of this Epistle, I shall leave it to speak for itself, when the reader has studied and well digested its contents.... This Epistle will not be difficult to understand, if our minds are unprejudiced, and at liberty to attend to the subject, and to the current scriptural sense of the words used. Great care is taken to guard and explain every part of the subject; no part of it is left unexplained or unguarded. Sometimes notes are written upon a sentence, liable to exception and wanting explanation, as ch. ii. 13-16. Here the 13th and 15th verses are a comment upon the former part of it. Sometimes are found comments upon a single word; as ch. x. 11-13. The 12th and 13th verses are a comment upon was, every one, in the 11th. This Epistle displays a perspicuous brevity, as ch. v. 13, 14. For until the law sin was in the world, etc. Surely never was there a greater variety of useful sentiments crowded into a smaller compass; and yet so skilfully, that one part very clearly explains another.... It is by the Holy Spirit's influence, that the apostle has brought such a variety of arguments, instructions, and sentiments, all stated, proved, and sufficiently guarded, explained, and defended, within the limits of a letter; which has made it a magazine of the most real, extensive, useful, profitable, and divine knowledge. The Jews are treated with great caution and tenderness.... The transitions and advances to an ungrateful subject are very interesting; as ch. ii. 1-17; viii. 17. Here is found complicated design, and while teaching one thing, gives us an opportunity of learning one or two more. So ch. xiii. 1-8, is taught the duty of subjects, and at the same time magistrates are instructed in their duty, and the grounds of their authority. The inspired writer never loses sight of his subject, and writes under a deep and lively sense of the truth and importance of the Gospel, as a man who clearly understood it, and in whose heart and affections it reigned far superior to all temporal considerations.'

21 the law. The passage quoted is taken from the prophet Isaiah; but the term torah, LAW, was used by the Jews to express the whole Scriptures, law, prophets, and hagiographia; and they used it to distinguish these Sacred Writings from the words of the scribes. It is not taken from the LXX., from which it varies as much as any words can differ from others where the general meaning is similar. It accords much more with the Hebrew; and may be considered as a translation from it; 'only what is said of God in the third person, in the Hebrew, is here expressed in the first person, with the addition of Λεγει Κυριος,' saith the Lord. —Dr. RANDOLPH. The Second Epistle of PAUL the Apostle to the CORINTHIANS.

A.D. 60. A.M. 4064.

CHAP. I.

Paul salutes the Corinthians, 1, 2; he encourages them against troubles, by the comforts and deliverances which God had given him, as in all his afflictions, 3-7, so particularly in his late danger in Asia, 8-11. And calling both his own conscience and theirs to witness of his sincere manner of preaching the immutable truth of the gospel, 12-14, he excuses his not coming to them, as proceeding not of lightness, but of his lenity towards them, 15-24.

CHAP. III.

Lest their false teachers should charge him with vain glory, he shews the faith and graces of the Corinthians to be a sufficient commendation of his ministry, 1-5. Whereupon entering a comparison between the ministers of the law and of the gospel, 6-11, he proves that his ministry is so far the more excellent, as the gospel of life and liberty is more glorious than the law of condemnation, 12-18.

CHAP. IV.

He declares how he has used all sincerity and faithful diligence in preaching the gospel, 1-6, and how the troubles and persecutions which he daily endured for the same did redound to the praise of God's power, 7-11, to the benefit of the church, 12-15, and to the apostle's own eternal glory, 16-18.

CHAP. VII.

He proceeds in exhorting them to purity of life, 1; and to bear him like affection as he does to them, 2. Whereof lest he might seem to doubt, he declares what comfort he took in his afflictions by the report which Titus gave of their godly sorrow, which his former epistle had wrought in them, 3-12; and of their loving-kindness and obedience toward Titus, answerable to his former boastings of them, 13-16.

CHAP. VIII.

He stirs them up to a liberal contribution for the poor saints at Jerusalem, by the example of the Macedonians, 1-6; by commendation of their former forwardness, 7, 8; by the example of Christ, 9-13; and by the spiritual profit that shall redound to themselves thereby, 14, 15; commending to them the integrity and willingness of Titus, and those other brethren, who upon his request, exhortation, and commendation, were purposely come to them for this business, 16-24.

CHAP. IX.

He yields the reason why, though he knew their forwardness, yet he sent Titus and his brethren beforehand, 1-5. And he proceeds in stirring them up to a bountiful alms, as being but a kind of sowing of seed, 6-9, which shall return a great increase to them, 10-12, and occasion a great sacrifice of thanksgivings unto God, 13-15.

CHAP. X.

Against the false apostles, who disgraced the weakness of his person and bodily presence, he shews the spiritual might and authority with which he was armed against all adverse powers, 1-6; assuring them that at his coming he will be found as mighty in word as he is now in writing, being absent, 7-11; and withal taxing them for reaching out themselves beyond their compass, and vaunting themselves of other men's labours, 12-18.

CHAP. XI.

Out of his jealousy over the Corinthians, who seemed to make more account of the false apostles than of him, he enters into a forced commendation of himself, 1-4, of his equality with the chief apostles, 5, 6, of his preaching the gospel to them freely, and without any charge to them, 7-12; shewing that he was not inferior to those deceitful workers in any legal prerogative, 13-23; and in the service of Christ, and in all kinds of sufferings for his ministry, far superior, 23-33.

Herod applied to Tiberius for help, who sent Vitellius to reduce Aretas, and to bring him alive or dead to Rome. By some means or other, Vitellius delayed his operations, and in the mean time Tiberius died; and it is probable that Aretas, who was thus snatched from ruin, availed himself of the favourable state of things, and seized on Damascus, which had belonged to his ancestors.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE SECOND EPISTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

THE most remarkable circumstance in this Epistle, observes Mr. SCOTT, is the confidence of the Apostle in the goodness of his cause, and in the power of God to bear him out in it. Opposed as he then was by a powerful and sagacious party, whose authority, reputation, and interest were deeply concerned, and who were ready to seize on every thing that could discredit him, it is wonderful to hear him so firmly insist upon his apostolical authority, and so unreservedly appeal to the miraculous powers which he had exercised and conferred at Corinth. So far from shrinking from the contest, as afraid of some discovery being made, unfavourable to him and the common cause, he, with great modesty and meekness indeed, but with equal boldness and decision, expressly declares that his opposers and despisers were the ministers of Satan, and menaces them with miraculous judgments, when as many of their deluded hearers had been brought to repentance and re-established in the faith, as proper means could in a reasonable time effect. It is inconceivable that a stronger internal testimony, not only of integrity, but of divine inspiration, can exist. Had there been any thing of imposture among the Christians, it was next to impossible but such a conduct must have occasioned a disclosure of it. Of the effects produced by this latter epistle we have no circumstantial account; for the journey which St. Paul took to Corinth, after he had written it, is mentioned by St. Luke only in a few words, (Ac. xx. 2, 3.) We know, however, that St. Paul was there after he had written this Epistle; that the contributions for the poor brethren at Jerusalem were brought to him from different parts to that city (Ro. xv. 26;) and that, after remaining there several months, he sent salutations from some of the principal members of that church, by whom he must have been greatly respected, to the church of Rome (Ro. xvi. 22, 23.) From this time we hear no more of the false teacher and his party; and when CLEMENT of Rome wrote his epistle to the Corinthians, St. Paul was considered by them as a divine apostle, to whose authority he might appeal without fear of contradiction. The false teacher, therefore, must either have been silenced by St. Paul, by virtue of his apostolical powers, and by an act of severity which he had threatened, (2 Co. xiii. 2, 3;) or this adversary of the apostle had, at that time, voluntarily quitted the place. Whichever was the cause, the effect produced must operate as a confirmation of our faith, and as a proof of St. Paul's divine mission.

CHAP. I.

He wonders that they have so soon left him and the gospel, 1-7; and accurses those that preach any other gospel than he did, 8-10. He learned the gospel not of men, but of God, 11-18; and shews what he was before his calling, 14-16; and what he did immediately after it, 17-24.

CHAP. II.

He shews when he went up again to Jerusalem, and for what purpose, 1, 2; and that Titus was not circumcised, 3-10; and that he resisted Peter, and told him the reason, 11-13; why he and others, being Jews do believe in Christ to be justified by faith, and not by works, 14-19; and that they live not in sin, who are so justified, 20, 21.

CHAP. IV.

We were under the law till Christ came, as the heir is under the guardian till he be of age, 1-4. But Christ freed us from the law, 5, 6; therefore we are servants no longer to it, 7-18. He remembers their good will to him, and his to them, 14-21; and shews that we are the sons of Abraham by the free-woman, 22-31.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE EPISTLE TO THE GALATIANS.

The Galatians, or Gallogræcians, were the descendants of Gauls, who migrated from their own country, and after a series of disasters, got possession of a large district in Asia Minor, from them called Galatia. (Pausanias, Attic. c. iv.) They are mentioned by historians as a tall and valiant people, who went nearly naked, and used for arms only a buckler and sword; and the impetuosity of their attack is said to have been irresistible. Their religion, before their conversion, was extremely corrupt and superstitious: they are said to have worshipped the mother of the gods, under the name of Adgistis; and to have offered human sacrifices of the prisoners they took in war. Though they spoke the Greek language in common with almost all the inhabitants of Asia Minor, yet it appears from Jerome that they retained their original Gaulish language even as late as the fifth century. Christianity appears to have been first planted in these regions by St. Paul himself, (ch. i. 6; iv. 13;) who visited the churches at least twice in that country, (Ac. xvi. 6; xviii. 23.) It is evident that this epistle was written soon after their reception of the gospel, as he complains of their speedy apostacy from his doctrine, (ch. i. 6;) and as there is no notice of his second journey into that country, it has been supposed, with much probability, that it was written soon after his first, and consequently about A.D. 52 or 53. It appears that soon after the Apostle had left them, some Judaizing teachers intruded themselves into the churches; drawing them off from the true gospel, to depend on ceremonial observances, and to the vain endeavour of 'establishing their own righteousness.' It was in order to oppose this false gospel that St. Paul addressed the Galatians, and after saluting the churches of Galatia, and establishing his apostolic commission against the attacks of the false teachers, he reproves them for departing from that gospel which he had preached to them, and confirmed by the gift of the Holy Ghost; —proves that justification is by faith alone, and not by the deeds of the law, from the example of Abraham, the testimony of Scripture, the curse of the law, the redemption of Christ, and the Abrahamic covenant, which the law could not disannul;—shews the use of the law in connection with the covenant of grace; concludes that all believers are delivered from the law, and made the spiritual seed of Abraham by faith in Christ; illustrates his inference by God's treatment of the Jewish church, which he put under the law, as a father puts a minor under a guardian; shews the weakness and folly of the Galatians in subjecting themselves to the law, and that by submitting themselves to circumcision they become subject to the whole law, and would forfeit the benefits of the covenant of grace; gives them various instructions and exhortations for their Christian conduct, and particularly concerning the right use of their Christian freedom; and concludes with a brief summary of the topics discussed, and by commending them to the grace of Christ.

CHAP. II.

By comparing what we were by nature, with what we are by grace, 1-9, he declares that we are made for good works: and being brought near by Christ, should not live as Gentiles and foreigners, as in time past, but as citizens with the saints, and the family of God, 10-22.

CHAP. III.

The hidden mystery that the Gentiles should be saved was made known to Paul by revelation, 1-7; and to him was that grace given, that he should preach it, 8-12. He desires them not to faint for his tribulation, 13; and prays that they may perceive the great love of Christ toward them, 14-21.

CHAP. IV.

He exhorts to unity, 1-6; and declares that God therefore gives divers gifts unto men, 7-10: that he church might be edified, 11-15, and grow up in Christ, 16, 17. He calls them from the impurity of the Gentiles, 18-23; to put on the new man, 24; to cast off lying, 25-28; and corrupt communication, 29-32.

The Epistle of PAUL the Apostle to the PHILIPPIANS.

A.D. 64. A.M. 4068.

CHAP. I.

Paul testifies his thankfulness to God, and his love towards them, for the fruits of their faith, and fellowship in his sufferings, 1-8; daily praying to him for their increase in grace, 9-11; he shews what good the faith of Christ had received by his troubles at Rome, 12-20; and how ready he is to glorify Christ either by his life or death, 21-26; exhorting them to unity, 27; and to fortitude in persecution, 28-30.

CHAP. II.

Paul exhorts them to unity, and to all humbleness of mind, by the example of Christ's humility and exaltation, 1-11; to a careful proceeding in the way of salvation, that they be as lights to the wicked world, 12-15, and comforts to him their apostle, which is now ready to be offered up to God, 16-18. He hopes to send Timothy to them, and Epaphroditus also, 19-30.

CHAP. III.

He warns them to beware of the false teachers of the circumcision, 1-3; shewing that himself has greater cause than they to trust in the righteousness of the law, 4-6; which notwithstanding he counts as dung and loss, to gain Christ and his righteousness, 7-11; therein acknowledging his own imperfection, 12-14. He exhorts them to be thus minded, 15, 16; and to imitate him, 17, and to decline the ways of carnal Christians, 18-21.

JEROME states, (in Philem.) that St. Paul had converted many in Cesar's family; for 'being by the emperor cast into prison, he became more known to his family, and turned the house of Christ's persecutor into a church.'

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE EPISTLE TO THE PHILIPPIANS.

The Church at Philippi in Macedonia was planted by the Apostle Paul about A.D. 53, (Ac. xvi. 9 40;) and it appears he visited them again, A.D. 60, though no particulars are recorded concerning that visit, (Ac. xx. 6.) The Philippians were greatly attached to St. Paul, and testified their affection by sending him supplies, even when labouring for other churches, (ch. iv. 15, 16; 2 Co. xi. 9;) and when they heard that he was under confinement at Rome, they sent Epaphroditus, one of their pastors, to him with a present, lest he should want necessaries during his imprisonment, (ch. ii. 25; iv. 10, 14-18.) The more immediate occasion of the Epistle was the return of Epaphroditus, by whom the apostle sent it as a grateful acknowledgment of their kindness; which occurred towards the close of his first imprisonment, about the end of A.D. 62, or the commencement of 63.

It is now called Eski-hissar, the old castle; and besides the whole surface within the city's wall being strewed with pedestals and fragments, the ruins of an amphitheatre, a magnificent odeum, and other public buildings, attest its former splendour and magnificence. But, when visited by Dr. CHANDLER, all was silence and solitude; and a fox, first discovered by his cars peeping over a brow, was the only inhabitant of Laodicea. Hierapolis, now Pambouk-Kaissi, was situated, according to the Itinerary, six miles N. of Laodicea; and its ruins are now about a mile and a half in circumference. ver. 15, 16; ch. 2. 1. CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE EPISTLE TO THE COLOSSIANS.

COLOSSE was a large and populous city of Phrygia Pacatiana, in Asia Minor, seated on an eminence to the south of the river Meander. It is supposed to have occupied a site now covered with ruins, near the village of Konos or Khonas, and about twenty miles N. W. of Degnizlu. By whom, or at what time, the church at Colosse was founded is wholly uncertain; but it would appear from the apostle's declaration, ch. ii. 1, that he was not the honoured instrument. It appears from the tenor of this epistle to have been, upon the whole, in a very flourishing state: but some difficulties having arisen among them, they sent Epaphras to Rome, where the apostle was now imprisoned, (ch. iv. 8,) to acquaint him with the state of their affairs. It is remarkable for a peculiar pathos and ardour, which is generally ascribed to the extraordinary divine consolations enjoyed by the apostle during his sufferings for the sake of Christ. Whoever, says MICHAELIS, would understand the Epistles to the Ephesians and Colossians, must read them together. The one is in most places a commentary on the other; the meaning of single passages in one epistle, which, if considered alone, might be variously interpreted, being determined by the parallel passages in the other epistle.

First Epistle of PAUL the Apostle to the THESSALONIANS.

CHAP. I.

The Thessalonians are given to understand both how mindful of them Saint Paul was at all times in thanksgiving, and prayer, 1-4; and also how well he was persuaded of the truth and sincerity of their faith and conversion to God, 5-10.

CHAP. III.

Saint Paul testifies his great love to the Thessalonians, partly by sending Timothy unto them to strengthen and comfort them ; partly by rejoicing in their well-doing, 1-9 ; and partly by praying for them, and desiring a safe coming unto them, 10-13.

The Second Epistle of PAUL the Apostle to the THESSALONIANS.

CHAP. I.

St. Paul certifies them of the good opinion which he had of their faith, love, and patience, 1-10; and therewithal uses divers reasons for the comforting of them in persecution, whereof the chief is taken from the righteous judgment of God, 11, 12.

Their faith was multiplied, and their love abounded: and this was not the case with some distinguished characters only; it was the case with every one of them. For this the apostle felt himself bound to give continual thanks to God on their behalf, as it was 'meet' and right.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE EPISTLES TO THE THESSALONIANS.

The First Epistle to the Thessalonians, it is generally agreed, was the earliest written of all St. Paul's epistles, whence we see the reason and propriety of his anxiety that it should be read in all the Christian churches of Macedonia—'I charge you by the Lord, that this Epistle be read unto all the holy brethren.' (ch. v. 27.) 'The existence of this clause,' observes Dr. Paley, 'is an evidence of its authenticity; because, to produce a letter, purporting to have been publicly read in the church at Thessalonica, when no such letter had been read or heard of in that church, would be to produce an imposture destructive of itself. . . . Either the Epistle was publicly read in the church of Thessalonica during St. Paul's lifetime, or it was not. If it was, no publication could be more authentic, no species of notoriety more unquestionable, no method of preserving the integrity of the copy more secure. . . . If it was not, the clause would remain a standing condemnation of the forgery, and one would suppose, an invincible impediment to its success.' Its genuineness, however, has never been disputed; and it has been universally received in the Christian church, as the inspired production of St. Paul, from the earliest period to the present day. The circumstance of this injunction being given in the first epistle which the Apostle wrote, also implies a strong and avowed claim to the character of an inspired writer; as in fact it placed his writings on the same ground with those of Moses and the ancient prophets. The second Epistle, besides those marks of genuineness and authority which it possesses in common with the others, bears the highest evidence of its divine inspiration, in the representation which it contains of the papal power, under the characters of 'the Man of sin,' and 'the Mystery of iniquity.' The true Christian worship is the worship of the one only God, through the one only Mediator, the man Christ Jesus; and from this worship the church of Rome has most notoriously departed, by substituting other mediators, invocating and adoring saints and angels, worshipping images, adoring the host, etc. It follows, therefore, that 'the Man of sin' is the Pope; not only on account of the disgraceful lives of many of them, but by means of their scandalous doctrines and principles; dispensing with the most necessary duties, selling pardons and indulgences for the most abominable crimes, and perverting the worship of God to the grossest superstition and idolatry. It was evidently the chief design of the Apostle, in writing to the Thessalonians, to confirm them in the faith, to animate them to a courageous profession of the Gospel, and to the practice of all the duties of Christianity; but to suppose, with Dr. Macknight, that he intended to prove the divine authority of Christianity by a chain of regular arguments, in which he answered the several objections which the heathen philosophers are supposed to have advanced, seems quite foreign to the nature of the epistles, and to be grounded on a mistaken notion, that the philosophers designed at so early a period to enter on a regular disputation with the Christians, when in fact they derided them as enthusiasts, and branded their doctrines as 'foolishness.' In pursuance of his grand object, 'it is remarkable,' says Dr. Doddridge, 'with how much address he improves all the influence which his zeal and fidelity in their service must naturally give him, to inculcate upon them the precepts of the gospel, and persuade them to act agreeably to their sacred character. This was the grand point he always kept in view, and to which every thing else was made subservient. Nothing appears, in any part of his writings, like a design to establish his own reputation, or to make use of his ascendancy over his Christian friends to answer any secular purposes of his own. On the contrary, in this and in his other epistles, he discovers a most generous, disinterested regard for their welfare, expressly disclaiming any authority over their consciences, and appealing to them, that he had chosen to maintain himself by the labour of his own hands, rather than prove burdensome to the churches, or give the least colour of suspicion, that, under zeal for the gospel, and concern for their improvement, he was carrying on any private sinister view. The discovery of so excellent a temper must be allowed to carry with it a strong presumptive argument in favour of the doctrines he taught. . . . And, indeed, whoever reads St. Paul's epistles with attention, and enters into the spirit with which they were written, will discern such intrinsic characters of their genuineness, and the divine authority of the doctrines they contain, as will, perhaps, produce in him a stronger conviction than all the external evidence with which they are attended.' These remarks are exceedingly well grounded and highly important; and to no other Epistles can they apply with greater force than the present most excellent productions of the inspired Apostle. The last two chapters of the first epistle, in particular, as Dr. A. Clarke justly observes, 'are certainly among the most important, and the most sublime in the New Testament. The general judgment, the resurrection of the body, and the states of the quick and the dead, the unrighteous and the just, are described, concisely indeed, but they are exhibited in the most striking and affecting points of view.'

The First Epistle of PAUL the Apostle to TIMOTHY.

A.D. 65. A.M. 4069.

CHAP. I.

Timothy is put in mind of the charge which was given unto him by Paul at his going to Macedonia, 1–4. Of the right use and end of the law, 5–10. Of Saint Paul's calling to be an apostle, 11–19; and Hymeneus and Alexander, 20.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE FIRST EPISTLE TO TIMOTHY.

This Epistle bears the impress of its genuineness and authenticity, which are corroborated by the most decisive external evidence; and its Divine inspiration is attested by the exact accomplishment of the prediction which it contains respecting the apostacy in the latter days. This prophecy is similar in the general subject to that in the second Epistle to the Thessalonians, though it differs in the particular circumstances; and exactly corresponds with that of the prophet Daniel on the same subject, (Da. xi. 38.) This important prediction might be more correctly rendered, 'Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall apostatize from the faith, giving heed to erroneous spirits, and doctrines concerning demons, through the hypocrisy of liars, having their consciences seared with a hot iron, forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats,' etc. How applicable these particulars are to the corruptions of the Church of Rome need scarcely be insisted on. The worship of saints in that church is essentially the same with the worship of demons among the heathen; which has been established in the world by books forged in the name of the Apostles and saints, by lying legends of their lives, by false miracles ascribed to their relics, and by fabulous dreams and relations; while celibacy was enjoined and practised under pretence of chastity, and abstinence under pretence of devotion. None but the SPIRIT OF GOD could foresee and foretel these remarkable events.

The Second Epistle of PAUL the Apostle to TIMOTHY.

The Epistle of PAUL the Apostle to PHILEMON.

A.D. 64. A.M. 4068.

Paul rejoices to hear of the faith and love of Philemon, whom he desires to forgive his servant Onesimus, and lovingly to receive him again.

1 a prisoner. ver. 9. See on Ep. 3. 1; 4. 1; 6. 20. 2 Ti. 1. 8. Timothy. See on 2 Co. 1. 1. Col. 1. 1. 2 Th. 1. 1. Philemon. The apostle in this epistle indulges in some fine paronomasias on the proper names. Thus Philemon, Φιλημον, affectionate, or beloved, is 'our dearly beloved;' Apphia, (Απφια, from απφα, the affectionate address of a brother or sister, according to SUIDAS,) is 'the beloved sister,' as several MSS., Vulgate, and others correctly read; Archippus, (Αρχιππος, the ruler of the horse, for the managing of which heroes were anciently famous,) is 'our fellow-soldier;' and Onesimus, (Ονησιμος, useful or profitable,) once unprofitable, is now profitable. and fellow-labourer. ver. 24. 1 Co. 3. 9. CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE EPISTLE TO PHILEMON.

PHILEMON appears to have been a person of some consideration at Colosse, and in the church at that place, (ver. 1, 2. Col. iv. 9, 17,) who had been converted by the ministry of St. Paul, (ver. 19,) probably during his abode at Ephesus, (Ac. xix. 10.) Onesimus, a slave of Philemon, having, as it is generally thought, been guilty of some dishonesty, fled from his master, and came to Rome, where the apostle was at that time under confinement the first time, as appears by his expectation of being shortly released, (ver. 22,) about A.D. 62. Having by some means attended the preaching of the apostle, 'in his own hired house,' (Ac. xxviii. 16, 23,) it pleased God to bless it to his conversion. After he had given satisfactory evidence of a real change, and manifested an excellent and amiable disposition, which greatly endeared him to St. Paul, he was sent back to his master by the apostle, who wrote this epistle to reconcile Philemon to his once unfaithful servant.

CHAP. X.

The weakness of the law sacrifices, 1-9. The sacrifice of Christ's body once offered, 10-18, for ever hath taken away sins, 14-18. An exhortation to hold fast the faith with patience and thanksgiving, 19-39.

1 having. See on ch. 8. 5; 9. 9, 11, 23. Col. 2. 17. with. ver. 3, 4, 11-18. ch. 7. 18, 19; 9. 8, 9, 25. perfect. ver. 14.

2 would they not have. or, they would have. once. ver. 17; ch. 9. 13, 14. Ps. 103. 12. Is. 43. 25; 44. 22. Mi. 7. 19. conscience. Our translators use the word conscience here, as elsewhere, for consciousness.

3 a remembrance. ch. 9. 7. Ex. 30. 10. Le. 16. 6-11, 21, 22, 29, 30, 34; 23. 27, 28. Nu. 29. 7-11. 1 Ki. 17. 18. Mat. 26. 28.

Mar. 12. 33. take. There were essential defects in these sacrifices. 1st.—They were not of the same nature with those who sinned. 2nd.—They were not of sufficient value to make satisfaction for the affronts done to the justice and government of God. 3rd.—The beasts offered up under the law could not consent to put themselves in the sinner's room and place. The atoning sacrifice must be one capable of consenting, and must voluntarily substitute himself in the sinner's stead: Christ did so. ver. 11. Ho. 14. 2. Jno. 1. 29. Ro. 11. 27. 1 Jno. 3. 5.

The apostle in the early part of the chapter having given us a general account of the grace of faith, proceeds to set before us some illustrious examples of it in Old Testament times. The leading instance and example of faith recorded, is that of righteous Abel: one of the first saints and the first martyr for religion—one who lived by faith and died for it, and therefore a fit pattern for the Hebrews to imitate. It is observable that the Holy Spirit has not thought fit to say any thing here of the faith of our first parents; and yet the church of God has generally, by a pious charity, taken it for granted that God gave them repentance and faith in the promised seed; that he instructed them in the mystery of sacrificing, that they instructed their children in it, and that they found mercy with God, after they had ruined themselves and all their posterity. But God has left the matter still under some doubt, as a warning to all who have great talents given to them, and a great trust reposed in them, that they do not prove unfaithful, since God would not enrol our first parents among the number of believers in this blessed calendar.—Henry.

CHAP. I.

We are to rejoice under the cross, 1-4; to ask patience of God, 5-12; and in our trials not to impute our weakness, or sins, to him, 13-18, but rather to hearken to the word, to meditate on it, and to do thereafter, 19-25. Otherwise men may seem, but never be, truly religious, 26, 27.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE EPISTLE OF JAMES.

JAMES, the son of Alpheus, the brother of Jacob, and the near relation of our Lord, called also James the Less, probably because he was of lower stature, or younger, than the other James, the son of Zebedee, is generally allowed to be the writer of this Epistle; and the few that have doubted this have assigned very slight reasons for their dissent, and advanced very weak arguments on the other side. It is recorded in ecclesiastical history, and the book of the Acts of the Apostles confirms the fact, that he generally resided at Jerusalem, superintending the churches in that city, and in the neighbouring places, to the end of his life, which was terminated by martyrdom about A.D. 62. This epistle appears to have been written but a short time before his death; and it is probable that the sharp rebukes and awful warnings given in it to his countrymen excited that persecuting rage which terminated his life. It is styled Catholic, or General, because it was not addressed to any particular church, but to the Jewish nation throughout their dispersions. Though its genuineness was doubted for a considerable time, yet its insertion in the ancient Syriac version, which was executed at the close of the first, or the beginning of the second century, and the citation of, or allusion to it, by CLEMENT of Rome, HERMAS, and IGNATIUS, and its being quoted by ORIGEN, JEROME, ATHANASIUS, and most of the subsequent ecclesiastical writers, as well as its internal evidence, are amply sufficient to prove the point.

CHAP. I.

He blesses God for his manifold spiritual graces, 1-9; shewing that the salvation in Christ is no news, but a thing prophesied of old 10-12; and exhorts them accordingly to a godly conversation, forasmuch as they are now born anew by the word of God, 13-25.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PETER.

As the design of this Epistle is excellent, remarks Dr. Macknight, so its execution, in the judgment of the best critics, does not fall short of its design. Ostervald says of the first Epistle of Peter, 'it is one of the finest books of the New Testament.' Erasmus pronounces it to be 'worthy the prince of the Apostles, and full of apostolical dignity and authority;' and adds, 'it is sparing in words, but full of sense,—verbis pauca, sententiis differta.' 'As the true Church of Christ,' says Dr. Clarke, 'has generally been in a state of suffering, the Epistles of St. Peter have ever been most highly prized by all believers. That which we have just finished is an admirable letter, containing some of the most important maxims and consolations for the Church in the wilderness. No Christian can read it without deriving from it both light and life. Ministers especially should study it well, that they may know how to comfort their flocks when in persecution or adversity. He never speaks to good in any spiritual case who is not furnished out of the Divine treasury. God's words invite, solicit, and command assent; on them a man may confidently rely. The words of man may be true, but they are not infallible; this is the character of God's word alone.' To these valuable remarks on the varied excellences and uses of this inimitable Epistle, it may be only necessary to add, that it is not only important in these respects, but is a rich treasury of Christian doctrines and duties from which the mind may be enriched and the heart improved with the most ennobling sentiments.

CHAP. I.

Confirming them in hope of the increase of God's graces, 1-4, he exhorts them, by faith, and good works, to make their calling sure, 5-11; whereof he is careful to remind them, knowing that his death is at hand, 12-15; and warns them to be constant in the faith of Christ, who is the true Son of God, by the eyewitness of the apostles beholding his majesty, and by the testimony of the Father, and the prophets, 16-21.

The general Epistle of JUDE.

A.D. 66. A.M. 4070.

CHAP. I.

He exhorts them to be constant in the profession of the faith, 1-3. False teachers are crept in to seduce them, for whose evil doctrine and manners horrible punishment is prepared, 4-19; whereas the godly, by the assistance of the Holy Spirit, and prayers to God, may persevere, and grow in grace, and keep themselves, and recover others out of the snares of those deceivers, 20-25.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE EPISTLE OF JUDE.

ST. JUDE, says Origen, has written an Epistle, in a few lines indeed, but full of vigorous expressions of heavenly grace.—Ιουδας μεν εγραψεν επιστολην ολιγοστιχον μεν, πεπληρωμενην δε ουρανιου χαριτος, ερρωμενων λογων. He briefly and forcibly represents the detestable doctrines and practices of certain false teachers, generally supposed to be the impure Gnostics, Nicolaitans, and followers of Simon Magus; and reproves these profligate perverters of sound principles, and patrons of lewdness, with a holy indignation and just severity; while at the same time he exhorts all sound Christians, with genuine apostolic charity, to have tender compassion on these deluded wretches, and to endeavour vigorously to reclaim them from the ways of hell, and pluck them as brands out of the fire. There is a great similarity in sentiment and style between this Epistle and the second chapter of the second Epistle of Peter. Both writers are nearly alike in vehemence and holy indignation against impudence and lewdness, and against those who insidiously undermine chastity, purity, and sound principles.

Job 2. 6. they should be. ver. 10. five. Five prophetical months, each consisting of thirty days, and each day denoting a year, amount to 150 years; and accordingly, from the time that Mohammed began to propagate his imposture, A.D. 612, to the building of Bagdad, when they ceased from their ravages, A.D. 763, are just 150 years. and their. See on ver. 3.

17 having. This appears to point out the scarlet, blue, and yellow colours, for which the Turks have always been remarkable. The 'four angels bound in the Euphrates' denote their four sultanies bordering on that river, where they were confined till after the period of the Crusades. The time for which they were prepared, 'an hour, and a day, and a month, and a year,' computing a year for each day, amounts to 391 years, 15 days; and from their first conquest over the Christians, A.D. 1281, to the taking of Cameniec from the Poles, A.D. 1672, which was the last conquest by which their dominion was extended, is exactly that period. ver. 9. jacinth. ch. 21. 20. brimstone. ver. 18; ch. 14. 10; 19. 20; 21. 8. Je. 51. 47, 48. and ye. It is peculiarly worthy of remark, that the apostles, who are idolatrously honoured at Rome, and daily worshipped, should be specially mentioned as rejoicing in her fall; as if it 'avenged them' on her, for the dishonour cast on their characters, while it vindicated the glory of God. Ep. 2. 20; 3. 5; 4. 11. 2 Pe. 3. 2. Jude 17. God. ch. 6. 10; 19. 2. De. 32. 42. Ps. 18. 47; 94. 1. Is. 26. 21. Lu. 11. 49, 50; 18. 7, 8.

21 a mighty. This was to represent the violence of her fall, and that she should never rise again; which is further illustrated by varied emphatical expressions taken from the ancient prophets. But Rome is still standing and flourishing, and honoured by many nations as the metropolis of the Christian world; she still resounds with singers and musicians; she still excels in arts, which serve for pomp and luxury; she still abounds with candles, and lamps, and torches, burning even by day, as well as by night; and consequently this prophecy has not been, but remains to be, fulfilled. Thus. Ex. 15. 5. CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF REVELATION.

THE obscurity of this prophecy, which has been urged against its genuineness, necessarily results from the highly figurative and symbolical language in which it is delivered, and is, in fact, a strong internal proof of its authenticity and divine original. 'For it is a part of this prophecy,' as SIR ISAAC NEWTON justly remarks, 'that it should not be understood before the last age of the world; and therefore it makes for the credit of the prophecy that it is not yet understood. The folly of interpreters has been to foretell times and things by this prophecy, as if God designed to make them prophets. By this rashness they have not only exposed themselves, but brought the prophecy also into contempt. The design of God was much otherwise. He gave this, and the prophecies of the Old Testament, not to gratify men's curiosities by enabling them to foreknow things, but that, after that they were fulfilled, they might be interpreted by the event; and his own providence, not the interpreter's, be then manifested thereby to the world. For the event of things, predicted many ages before, will then be a convincing argument that the world is governed by Providence. For, as the few and obscure prophecies concerning Christ's first coming were for setting up the Christian religion, which all nations have since corrupted, so the many and clear prophecies concerning the things to be done at Christ's second coming, are not only for predicting, but also for effecting a recovery and re-establishment of the long-lost truth, and setting up a kingdom wherein dwells righteousness. The event will prove the Apocalypse; and this prophecy, thus proved and understood, will open the old prophets; and all together will make known the true religion, and establish it. There is already so much of the prophecy fulfilled, that as many as will take pains in this study may see sufficient instances of God's promise; but then, the signal revolutions predicted by all the holy prophets, will at once both turn men's eyes upon considering the predictions, and plainly interpret them. Till then we must content ourselves with interpreting what hath been already fulfilled.' And, as Mr. WESTON observes, 'if we were in possession of a complete and particular history of Asia, not only of great events, without person or place, names or dates, but of the exactest biography, geography, topography, and chronology, we might, perhaps, still be able to explain and appropriate more circumstances recorded in the Revelation, under the emperors of the East and the West, and in Arabia, Persia, Tartary, and Asia, the seat of the most important revolutions with which the history of Christianity has ever been interwoven and closely connected.' History is the great interpreter of prophecy. 'Prophecy is, as I may say,' observes Bp. NEWTON, 'history anticipated and contracted; history is prophecy accomplished and dilated; and the prophecies of Scripture contain the fate of the most considerable nations, and the substance of the most memorable transactions in the world, from the earliest to the latest times. Daniel and St. John, with regard to those latter times, are more copious and particular than the other prophets. They exhibit a series and succession of the most important events from the first of the four great empires to the consummation of all things. Their prophecies may really be said to be a summary of the history of the world; and the history of the world is the best comment upon their prophecies . . . . and the more you know of ancient and modern times, and the farther you search into the truth of history, the more you will be satisfied of the truth of prophecy.' The Revelation was designed to supply the place of that continued succession of prophets, which demonstrated the continued providence of God to the patriarchal and Jewish churches. 'The majority of commentators on the Apocalypse,' says Mr. TOWNSEND, 'generally acted on these principles of interpretation. They discover in this Book certain predictions of events which were fulfilled soon after they were announced; they trace in the history of later years various coincidences, which so fully agree with various parts of the Apocalypse, that they are justly entitled to consider them as the fulfilment of its prophecies; and, by thus tracing the one God of revelation through the clouds of the dark ages, through the storms of revolutions and wars, through the mighty convulsions which at various periods have agitated the world, their interpretations, even when they are most contradictory, when they venture to speculate concerning the future, are founded on so much undoubted truth, that they have materially confirmed the wavering faith of thousands. Clouds and darkness must cover the brightness of the throne of God, till it shall please him to enable us to bear the brighter beams of his glory. In the mean time, we trace his footsteps in the sea of the Gentile world, his path in the mighty waters of the ambitious and clashing passions of man. We rejoice to anticipate the day when the bondage of Rome, which would perpetuate the intellectual and spiritual slavery of man, shall be overthrown, and the day-spring of united knowledge and holiness bless the world.'

25 And behold, a certain lawyer stood up, and tempted him, saying, Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life? 26 He said unto him, What is written in the law? how readest thou? 27 And he answering, said, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind, and thy neighbour as thyself. 28 And he said unto him, Thou hast answered right: this do, and thou shalt live.

πειράζων αὐτὸν, καὶ λέγων· Διδάσκαλε, τί ποιήσας ζωὴν αἰώνιον κληρονομήσω; 26 Ὁ δὲ εἶπε πρὸς αὐτόν· Ἐν τῷ νόμῳ τί γέγραπται; πῶς ἀναγινώσκεις; 27 Ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπεν· Ἀγαπήσεις Κύριον τὸν Θεόν σου, ἐξ ὅλης τῆς καρδίας σου, καὶ ἐξ ὅλης τῆς ψυχῆς σου, καὶ ἐξ ὅλης τῆς ἰσχύος σου, καὶ ἐξ ὅλης τῆς διανοίας σου· καὶ τὸν πλησίον σου ὡς σεαυτόν. 28 Εἶπε δὲ αὐτῷ· Ὀρθῶς ἀπεκρίθης· τοῦτο ποίει, καὶ ζήσῃ.
